FROM THE BOARD CHAIR

THE YEAR 2023 was one of excitement and growth for the Morgantown Area Partnership. We are excited at this time of year to celebrate our community, our membership, our awardees, our Board of Directors and our staff. We look forward to hosting nearly 700 community leaders at the Morgantown Marriott at the Waterfront Place on April to celebrate past accomplishments and to share our vision as we move into the next year.

April is a time to celebrate since the Partnership will mark its fourth anniversary this month. Originally, the Partnership was comprised of the Morgantown Area Chamber of Commerce, the Monongalia County Development Authority, the Morgantown Area Economic Partnership and the Campus Neighborhoods Revitalization Corp. Now, we are thrilled to have been able to welcome Main Street Morgantown as our fifth member organization in the last year. We are thankful for the trust and commitment of our partners as we strive for even greater success made possible by the collective efforts of these five organizations.

In terms of success, the Partnership's budget continues to grow with the addition of new investor partner level memberships that currently comprise more than half of the total budget. The increased budget allows for more services to be available to our members and the community.

In accordance with the long-range plan of the Partnership, we have six full-time staff members and four part-time employees. In addition to Russ Rogerson, CEO, Erik Carlson continues to work as vice president of Economic Development Services and Amy Loomis, VP of Revitalization Services. AJ Hammond joined the team in January as VP of Chamber Services to complete the management team. Although the Partnership staff works with all aspects of the organization, these three continue to spend a good deal of time focused on the key services they represent. Moreover, other full-time staff include Jacob Coots, Membership & Public Affairs manager and Tanya Skeens, who serves as the Partnership's business manager. Finally, long-time community leader, Charlie Sims, is our chief member associate and Brooke Bolyard is contracted to provide our marketing and communication services.

We have been fortunate to continue to work with West Virginia University to provide opportunities for the students in the community. Current WVU students include Matt Porter who serves as a graduate assistant for the Partnership and Ava Vavrick who is assisting us in marketing.

Charged with the responsibility of the organization's direction, budget, planning and more, the Partnership Board of Directors is strong with 34 current members; a unique blend of public/private partners, including those from the four legacy organizations and local government bodies. This robust and diverse team will bring forth innovative and holistic strategies for the Partnership to lead economic growth for the Morgantown busi-

EARL L. CORE COMMUNITY SERVICE AWARD

Cutright, Callen earn Partnership's high praise

BY BEN CONLEY

BConley@DominionPost.com

Terri Cutright and Eldon Callen have a lot in common.

Both were born and raised in and around Morgantown.

Both were molded and inspired by hard-working, entrepreneurial, community-minded families.

Both have spent a career putting their passion and abilities to work in their hometown.

And now both have been added to the short list of those chosen as recipients of the Morgantown Area Partnership's Earl L. Core Community Service Award.

Among the area's most prestigious honors, Cutright and Callen join figures like Hazel Ruby McQuain, Don Nehlen, Mike Puskar, Hilda Radman Rosenbaum and others who have helped shape the past, present and future of the greater Morgantown area.

"The Earl L. Core Award is really about a career and even a lifetime of contributions to the community, and I can't think of better recipients than Terri Cutright and Eldon Callen," said Russ Rogerson, president and CEO of The Partnership. "Both Eldon and Terri are hometown people. It's wonderful to get a chance to give them some recognition for what they've done for many, many others."

The awards will be among those presented during The Partnership's Annual Chamber of Commerce Dinner from 5-8:30 p.m. April 27 at the Morgantown Event Center.

Terri Cutright

"I'm not going to pretend like this isn't a big deal, because it is a big deal," Cutright told The Dominion Post.

"I've watched many people win this award over the years and have been in admiration of the award itself and the people who have won it."

Cutright, whose natural inclination toward service had her ready to head abroad with The Peace Corps as a teen, was, over time, tempered by the consistency of her business-minded father, Wally Reed, who spent 48 years operating a service station in the community.

"I went through WVU and the [Business and Economics] school, but being in a home with an entrepreneurial father, and my mother who was also entrepreneurial in supporting the business, that's really where my business chops came from," Cutright said.

But as Cutright would learn, community service and smart business don't have to be mutually exclusive.

In fact, she said, the blending of the two was her greatest strength with Main Street Morgantown, an organization she helmed for some 25 years.

She's continued that dual mission since 2015, when she left Main Street to began working full time in her company, TRC & Associates.

"I have the desire to serve and enhance and make quality of life better for my community, but I also am a business person. That was my success with the Main Street programs I was involved with and I think that's another thing that helps me in my current business," she said.

"Most of my clients are either nonprofits or government. A big part of making them successful and helping them achieve their mission is helping them understand how having that business brain will help them achieve their passion or their mission for their cause."

Cutright said she's most proud of the fact that she's been able to spend a career doing what she loves in the city she loves.

"You don't go into something like Main Street unless you've got a real passion for it, but when you get to tell people that you're doing it for your hometown, it's indescribable."

Eldon Callen

"I just love Monongalia County and Morgantown. I love the people," Callen said.

"I remember one summer I had nearly 400 [paper route] customers — 200 in the morning and nearly 200 in the evening, and I walked it ... You didn't pass a person on the street that you didn't say 'hello' to. Everybody knew me and I knew everybody. Interestingly, for me, it hasn't changed that much over the years. I know so many people and so many people know me."

The third of eight children, Callen said his family moved into Morgantown from a small home on what is now Owl Creek Road when he was 10, shortly after the unexpected closure of the Wierton Mine put his father out of work.

"We moved into town and immediately went to work. We all had paper routes. We worked on apartments. We worked any jobs we could. There were eight of us and we worked all over town," he recalled. "Service to the community and working in the community was just what we did."

Callen would later join the Army and attend school on an Army scholarship. He spent time working as press secretary of United Mine Workers of America, operated a printing business and ran a business college before returning to school for a law degree.

He's operated his own law business in Morgantown, served a six-year term as a Monongalia County commissioner and been involved in more volunteer boards, commissions and community projects than can be recalled or included in this feature.

"I've just want to help people. I want to see the best in

NONPROFIT OF THE YEAR

Father starts Jacob's Ladder to help others with substance use issues

BY EVA MURPHY

Newsroom@DominionPost.com

Dr. Kevin Blankenship is a graduate of the WVU School of Medicine and a co-founder of the MedExpress chain of urgent care centers.

He is also a father. When his son, Jacob, was suffering from a substance use disorder, Blankenship wanted to ensure he got the best treatment possible. However, most traditional programs he researched had disheartening success rates.

"I wasn't willing to accept that my son had a one in eight chance of being successful in recovery," he said.

When researching treatment options, Blankenship read about a program in Arizona that blended camping and outdoor activities with more traditional recovery methods.

"What intrigued me was the connection to nature," Blankenship said. "We have great natural resources here in West Virginia, like white-water rafting and hiking, but there's also a lot of farming. Getting your hands in the dirt is very beneficial for people with all sorts of ailments, but especially mental health issues. I thought it would be a good idea to incorporate farming into recovery."

Jacob's Ladder at Brookside Farm was formed in 2015 when Blankenship reached out to the Utterback family of Brookside Farm in Aurora. The property, 247 acres of cropland, pastures and timber, has been in the Utterback family since 1972. Blankenship pitched his idea for a new kind of recovery program, and the owners came to an agreement with him on integrating Brookside Farm into the Jacob's Ladder recovery program.

"My parents wanted to help because they thought it was a very worthwhile opportunity," said Mark Utterback, who now holds the position of director of Farming at Jacob's Ladder. For the duration of the six-month program, participants reside across the road people. It comes naturally to me. I want to help people and I want to do good," he said. "That doesn't make me a saint. In fact I'm far from it. I can lose my temper with the best of them."

Callen is retired these days and says he's devoted much of his time to the Spruce Street United Methodist Church, where he's working to become a lay minister.

He said the Earl L. Core Award is just one of many awards he's been fortunate enough to receive throughout his life.

"But I'll tell you this means more to me than any of those awards because it's my home. These are my people," he said. "I've felt so much love in this community from so many people. This will always be my home."

from the farm in a restored and modernized historic residence.

According to Blankenship, the minds of addicts are geared toward immediate gratification as they self-medicate with substances to treat trauma, anxiety, depression and other pain. However, he believes farming can retrain their brains to see past the short-term.

"You plant a crop, you don't get the benefit right away," he said. "You have to water it, weed it and work it. Then, three or four months later, you may harvest it and enjoy it."

In addition to farming, patients at Jacob's Ladder also participate in 12-step meetings, music, mindfulness, art and wilderness adventure therapy. Seventy percent of former patients have sustained recovery at the two-year mark.

Blankenship partially credits the length of the program with its success. At six months, rather than the traditional 28 days, healthier habits can become more deeply ingrained. However, most health insurance plans don't cover extended stays.

"They will pay maybe for a month if you're lucky," said Blankenship. Jacob's Ladder engages in fundraising to help offset the cost to families.

"Receiving the Morgantown Area Partnership Award Nonprofit of the Year Award is certainly wonderful," he said. "The exposure helps people to know that we exist. People can reach out if they need help with an addiction, or people can find out how they can help us."

Blankenship and his team hope to one day have the funds to open more facilities like Jacob's Ladder to alleviate the pain of addiction throughout West Virginia.

ENTREPRENEUR OF THE YEAR

Kayal credits team for Puskar award

BY JIM BISSETT

JBissett@DominionPost.com

Into each life some rain must fall, the old poet said.

Bron Kayal didn't need any reminding on June 23, 2017.

Remnants of a tropical storm were roiling across north-central West Virginia.

An F-1 tornado, a rarity for the region, was spawned.

The funnel cloud, with its vortex of 95 mph winds, skittered over the narrow, high-banked roads around the Cheat Lake Marina that stormy Friday evening.

It snapped and uprooted trees, capsized boats and yanked the dock near Kayal's former Crab Shack Caribba.

"Just like King Kong and Godzilla," Kayal said, adding he was quite glad that an F-1 is the 98-pound weakling of the tornado world.

Even so, his restaurant wound up like a kid's discombobulated toy, after a day of rough play. The whole structure was off-kilter.

Even with all that, plus the fact power was knocked out, the restaurant still welcomed its Saturday dinner crowd regulars the next day.

With the tenacity and stubbornness of a crab's claws, the staff stayed for the cleanup.

No one had to ask.

The sun came up, and their boss stayed in also, elbow-to-elbow, until the place was hospitable again.

It's in that spirit that Kayal is receiving the Milan Puskar Entrepreneur of the Year from Morgantown Area Partnership.

Growing the brand — keeping the values

In the years since that tornado had its way, Kayal has also had his.

He's grown his portfolio and reinvented his brand while still keeping that small business scrappiness and "we're-all-in-this together," spirit.

Today, his HARMA group

— it stands for, Harmony in Hospitality — has morphed into five restaurants and nightspots.

The restaurant that was once twisted this way and that by a funnel cloud is now Dockside Grille, known for its American fare and meat-and-potatoes favorites.

Suncrest Town Centre is the collective address for his other four establishments.

There's the present-day Crab Shack Caribba, serving seafood with a Caribbean-fusion flair.

Nonno Carlo Italian Deli and Imports brings the best of Calabria to the country roads of West Virginia.

lineup of coffees and espresso.

With its original hand-crafted cocktails and other spirits, plus its industrial vibe and state-of-the-art sound system, COSMO unspools an uptown experience in the middle of a funky, scruffy college town.

Said college town quickly became his American, geographic identity.

He arrived in 2002 from his native India to study engineering — he wanted to please his parents — but, as he said, he wasn't about girders and core drillings.

His pulse was quickened by grilled tilapia and four-course meals.

Besides, he always like watching people enjoying themselves while knowing that he and the teams he assembled were why.

"And in the end, my parents ended up really supporting what I was trying to do in the hospitality industry," he said.

"I've always been blessed to be around good people," Kayal said.

"This place is home. HARMA is family."

Tornados (and other family ties)

When your family's in need, you're just there, he said.

In 2021, while everyone was being lashed around by the contagion tornado that was COVID, Kayal raised the minimum wage to $16 an hour for his employees.

Not that he refers to them, as such.

They're a team, he said, and that's that.

establishments," he said.

"We're not gonna be able to do that if the people there to greet them aren't happy and motivated," he continued.

"We've got the best team going, anywhere. I'd put them up against anyone."

Including Mother Nature, he said — on a scary, swirly evening six years ago.

"We knew we were gonna reopen that next day. We weren't gonna let a tornado get in the way."

VETERAN-OWNED BUSINESS

Azimuth keeps secrets, successes for 30 years

BY JIM BISSETT

JBissett@DominionPost.com

It's not always easy for a soldier to answer the "Where are you from?" question.

Especially if you've made parachute jumps into all kinds of situations and you've had your boots on the ground across 46 countries — in all kinds of situations.

Craig Hartzell, who has done every bit of the above, allows he was somewhat like that.

Until the company he was working for sent him to north-central West Virginia.

Until said company looked like it was going out of business. Until he decided he might want to start his own company here, so he could stay.

"That's exactly what I did, if you can believe it," he said. Mission accomplished.

That was in 1989, and he's been here since.

"I was really taken with this place," said Hartzell, who is founder, president and CEO of Azimuth, his Morgantown-based engineering services and defense contracting firm.

More than 30 years later, he and his company are being recognized with MAP's Veteran-Owned Business of the Year Award.

He's more than honored, he said, because he gets to share it with the Azimuth workforce.

They may not be able to tell you what they do for a living or what projects they're working on, their boss said.

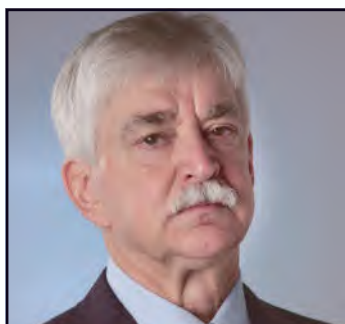

Even so, he said, they are still marquee stars in the industry — as esoteric, secretive and compressed as that industry has to be.

"Best in the world," Hartzell said.

Because of them, he said, Azimuth gets the best endorsement ever from the military it serves.

Silence.

That is, no complaints

Submitted photo

Craig Hartzell

from the field.

The reason is because stuff with the Azimuth nameplate never bogs down, falls apart or shorts out.

As a guy who wore the Special Forces uniform for the U.S. Army, Hartzell knows all about that.

Azimuth's electronic tracking devices, including its signature Diver 6 monitor unit that keeps track of military divers in rough seas, has long been on the U.S. Navy's coveted "Approved for Use" list, as one example he can talk about.

Whatever branch of the service using its products, Hartzell's company has one deep, abiding mission, it's founder said.

And that's to keep the men and women in uniform safe, whether they are combat zones or elsewhere.

Call it respect, he said.

Being stateside in West Virginia, Hartzell said, harkening back to Azimuth's early days, started out being a tough mission.

It wasn't always easy, but the help came from lawmakers, business leaders and members of the Mountain State's burgeoning tech community — and sometimes surprisingly so.

One contract, and one hire, led to another.

"It's special here," he said.

"That's why I didn't want to leave once I got here."

NEW BUSINESS OF YEAR

David Beard/The Dominion Post

Peak Health on Van Voorhis Road.

Peak new, but already experiencing growth

BY DAVID BEARD

DBeard@DominionPost.com

Peak Health, Morgantown Area Partnership's New Business of the Year, is young but already growing.

Peak Health formed a couple years ago, President Ben Gerber said. The self-insured medical insurance plan began handling WVU Medicine's 33,000 employees on Jan. 1.

The first provider-led health plan in West Virginia now has three minority co-owners — Mountain Health, Marshall Health and Valley Health — and will begin offering coverage to them on Jan. 1, 2024.

On that same date, Peak Health will begin offering Medicare Advantage in the counties where it operates; those plans will be offered to anyone Medicare-eligible in those counties.

Peak Health, Gerber said, was formed to align the insurance payer side with the way the providers are reimbursed. Self-funded plans typically pay a third-party administrator to handle the benefits; Peak Health can deliver the same network as a bigger plan at a lower administrative fee.

“We think that’s a big win for employers.”

The vertical integration allows for better use of resources, he said, and eliminates unnecessary care, with savings passed on to employers and customers,

LARGE BUSINESS OF YEAR

March-Westin starts in basement, now in 5 states

BY DAVID BEARD

DBeard@DominionPost.com

March-Westin is Morgantown Area Partnership's large Business of the Year.

Founder Phil Weser didn't have that in mind when he created his commercial contracting company in his basement in 1984.

“I really didn’t have big aspirations at all, I just wanted to be happier than working for somebody else.”

All the money they made went back into the company, he said. “I wanted see if I could be nice and still be a general contractor and treat everybody with respect — your employees, your clients. I was quite an idealist. Here we are, almost 40 years later and it worked.”

March-Westin describes itself as a full-service engineering, general contracting and design-build services company for commercial clients. It operates here and other states, including Pennsylvania, Ohio, Delaware and Virginia.

Look anywhere around town and you'll see their projects: The Morgantown Marriott at Waterfront Place and the adjacent WVU office tower; the new Erickson Alumni Center; all of the renovations and new buildings starting in 1992 at what was Mylan (now WVU Innovation Corp.); and the Mountaintop Beverage packaging plant in Morgantown Industrial Park, among many others.

His goal was to get maybe $2 million a year in business, Weser said. This coming year they'll have $75 million in projects in Delaware, $35 million in Pittsburgh, plus all local work. A couple years ago he calculated they'd done $2 billion locally in the local area on 4,000 projects.

"It got way bigger than I thought it would." Now 72, he said, "I probably should have retired several years ago. But I like the people that I go to work with, it's like a big family."

While March-Westin is the honoree, he's started other companies, brought in key people and made them owners too. There are 22 companies all told.

"They're not all as big as March-Westin, but they're valuable in the horizontal and vertical integration of our companies."

Lately, he's getting more into real estate. What's next?

"I want to see the wharf area turn into a live-work-play community and bring in high-tech jobs." He had just had some meetings on that issue when we conducted our interview. He'd like to see more entertainment, a place

CHAIRMAN'S AWARD

Foundation keeps Mylan Park growing

BY ERIN CLEAVENGER

ECleavenger@DominionPost.com

For the past 24 years, the mission of Mylan Park Foundation Inc. has been to ensure that everyone in the community, and visitors to the community, have something to bring them joy at the park.

With a goal to provide inclusive, high-quality programs, facilities and services, the nonprofit organization has done just that, while simultaneously providing a significant positive economic benefit to the greater Morgantown area.

In recognition of that contribution to the community, Mylan Park was awarded the Morgantown Area Partnership's 2023 Chairman's Award.

Consisting of just a few baseball and softball fields at its start on Feb. 16, 1999, Mylan Park has grown into a full-service sports, recreation, wellness and events campus spanning 400 acres in Monongalia County.

The park is home to several sports and community venues, including the Hazel and J.W. Ruby Community Center Event and Sports Complex, the Mylan Park Aquatic Center and Track Complex, multiple diamonds and multi-purpose fields.

On behalf of the Board of Directors, Executive Director Terri Howes said they were grateful to be the recipients of this year's Chairman's Award, "as it is recognition of not only the impact Mylan Park has on our community, but also the way in which Mylan Park has and continues to accomplish this impact."

Howes said the key points to the park's success have been, and continue to be, the impact in collaboration with community business leaders, many of whom are members of the Morgantown Area Partnership.

Additionally, Howes said, philanthropic support from foundations such as the Hazel Ruby McQuain Charitable Trust have been critical to the growth and sustainability of the park.

"This team approach has helped us create an intersection of sport, tourism and community for residents of and visitors to north-central West Virginia today and for years to come."

By bringing national recognition to the area with events like the U.S.A. Diving National Championships and with several new additions to the park in the works, including a KOA Campground, a BMX bike facility, and an all-inclusive playground, future growth of the park doesn't seem to be slowing down anytime soon.

"We are just humbled by this recognition," Howes said, "and we're proud to accept this award on behalf of the greater Morgantown community — which is who this award and Mylan Park really belongs to."

SMALL BUSINESS OF YEAR

Starport finds success in move, other changes

BY CAVAN TARLEY

CTarley@DominionPost.com

Starport Arcade and Pub is being honored as the Small Business of the Year by the Morgantown Area Partnership.

To the owners of Starport Arcade and Pub, it's an award that makes them grateful to have a successful business in the Morgantown Area.

"For myself, and Max (Cummons) and Chris (Meyers), I think we're proud and grateful to be receiving this," said Starport Arcade and Pub co-owner Robert Khoury.

Starport Arcade and Pub has had success in recent months since its grand opening in July 2022. It's become a popular destination for both children and young adults in the Morgantown area.

Prior to 2022, Starport was a smaller arcade and restaurant destination, founded in 2017 by Chris Meyers. After closing his business on Chesnut Street in 2020, Meyers teamed up with bar owners Khoury and Cummons to open up Starport Arcade and Pub.

"My business partner Max and I owned a bar named Blaze for five years before starting this venture with Chris," said Khoury. "In that time, we added games to our space and Chris was the vendor for those games."

According to Khoury, Meyers eventually suggested bringing Starport's arcade games to Blaze, after having multiple conversations during their business for bicyclists and pedestrians to hang out and enjoy themselves.

And where did that name come from?

The partner picked a name but they found out it was taken.

"We both decided if we put our names in it, it would fail and go bankrupt, and that's all anybody would remember."

Both their birthdays are in March, he said. That accounts for the first half. And while they were contemplating a name, he happened to look down on the floor and saw a travel magazine. On the back cover was a photo of a beautiful hotel — the Westin in Maui.

"I just said these two words sound good together. That was it."

Gerber said.

"By doing that, we can really deliver more efficient care, invest in population health resources that are really going to advance care and improve care and the cost of health care in the state."

Peak Health's growth is also healthy for the state as a whole, Gerber said. West Virginia has seen large health systems move operations out of state, with an accompanying outflow of jobs.

This new company will bring close to 100 new jobs to Morgantown, and as it expands, several hundred more new jobs.

And continued growth will provide continued benefits, he said. From a population health perspective, the more partners they bring in the more scale they can achieve, and more savings to pass on to employers and consumers.

They expect several satellite offices to pop up across the state, Gerber said, but most jobs will be located at the Peak Health office on Van Voorhis Road.

Commenting on the MAP award, Gerber said, "It means a lot to us. We really value our partnership with MAP." MAP offers a place for them to network and work with other businesses. "And MAP will help facilitate businesses understanding what Peak is and how we can help them."

WVU Medicine President and CEO Albert Wright offered some concluding comments.

"It's very important for us to be innovative as both the payer and a provider of health care to come up with new payment models that allow us to create complete incentives around keeping people healthy and in the lowest cost setting possible," he said. "If we can do that and create jobs and better health care here in West Virginia, I think that's a really cool thing and something we can all be proud of."

MEDIUM BUSINESS OF YEAR

Dedicated employees push Trilogy forward

BY CAVAN TARLEY

CTarley@DominionPost.com

Trilogy Innovations Inc. has been awarded the Medium Business of the Year by the Morgantown Area Partnership.

To Brandon Downey, president and CEO of Trilogy Innovations Inc., the award is a testament to the contributions of the employees at the company.

"It is a huge compliment to the work they have done," Downey said. "So it's not Randy (Cottle) and I anymore, but a dedicated workforce that has Trilogy's best interests in mind."

Downey added that the employees "are the ones that are there to protect the culture (of Trilogy) and bring in people that best compliment it."

Located in Bridgeport, Trilogy is a software and system engineering firm that provides high-tech solutions for a variety of industries.

Cottle, vice president and COO of Trilogy Innovations Inc., explained that they "do a lot of subject matter expertise for architecture of systems, database design, software engineering, web application and other things."

Downey noted that Trilogy "operates more off of strategy, taking a look at forecasting opportunities, making sure that Trilogy is built to handle the opportunities." He also explained that Trilogy spends "a lot of time with their customers to give them a comfort zone to letting us be trusted advisors."

Even though Trilogy was founded in 2010, it wasn't able to start doing business until 2015. According to Cottle, the previous company he and

Ron Rittenhouse/The Dominion Post

Downey were working for at the time made them sign a non-compete agreement because they were being bought out by a larger corporation.

Trilogy Innovations is among the many minority-owned business in West Virginia, with Downey owning 51% and Cottle owning 49%.

Due to being a minority-owned business, Cottle said they were able to get an 8(a) business development program in May 2021.

Trilogy has done contract work for a number of important government agencies. The Department of Defense, relationships. As a result of this business decision, Khoury and Cummons decided to drop the Blaze brand and merge with Meyers' business.

Starport Arcade moved into Blaze's original building, which had three floors instead of one.

"We have two bars, one on the main floor and one in the basement," said Khoury. "The top two floors are more of your modern, fancy, flashy, bright-light, big-screen that you see at box stores. And then our basement is our retro area with 21 pinballs, 10-20 retro cabinets and a pool table."

Khoury attributes the success that Starport has had this year to a number of different factors within the business.

"I think the staff is second-to-none," Khoury remarked. "They are very friendly and knowledgeable people who enjoy what they do, and I think that helps tremendously."

Khoury also adds that the variety of games and activities is a big driver for customers.

"Whether you're talking about arcade games, pinballs, or pool tables, we have something that I think can probably reach everybody," he said.

Starport Arcade and Pub hosts a wide-range of different events to bring more customers in — 80s Night, Zombie Prime and Disney Karaoke among those parties.

Starport Arcade and Pub is at 228 Walnut St., Morgantown. Hours are from 5 p.m.-1 a.m. Monday through Thursday, 5 p.m.-3 a.m. Friday, and 1 p.m.-3 a.m. Saturday and Sunday.

the FBI and NASA are among the prominent agencies Trilogy has worked with over the years.

Cottle believes much of the success of Trilogy is due to networking with the government agencies and having them as clients. However, Cottle gives special attribution for company's success to the people they have hired as part of their staff.

"A lot of the folks we've hired are subject matter experts and have been in the industry for a long time, but it's the reputation that we've built up about doing the right thing and becoming trusted advisors to the government, because for good or bad, we're always giving them an honest opinion," he said.

nesses and the entire community.

Over the last year, the Partnership has continued to provide its popular networking events, educational programs and member opportunities that originated from the Chamber of Commerce. Our goal is to give the community the active involvement, leadership and benefits that are expected by being a member of the Partnership.

The events over this past year achieved strong attendance, with our largest "Business After Hours" event attracting greater than 100 attendees. We also were excited to begin "Business Before Hours" on a bi-monthly basis. The Government Affairs and Transportation committees continued to address and inform members on issues and needs of the community. In addition, our Women's Innovative Networking Group revamped its efforts and continue to succeed in supporting women in business. Also in 2022, the 25th class of Leadership Mon, a program that fosters community leaders throughout Monongalia County, was formed.

There have been several economic development accomplishments to highlight from this past year. The Monongalia County Development Authority (MCDA) played a key role in two new companies coming to our area that will result in $200 million in private investment and more than 200 new jobs.

One of them, Mountaintop Beverage, is poised to begin producing and shipping their dairy products in the very near future! By working in concert with the state and the Monongalia County Commission, these new companies will be in the Morgantown Industrial Park. The MCDA also continues its development project along the Richwood Avenue corridor that will add value to the neighborhood and provide more connectivity to downtown Morgantown and the WVU campus.

The MCDA is excited to welcome Omnis Building Technologies to its site on Collins Ferry Road. This manufacturing company has made a major investment in our community and is providing great job opportunities for the people who live here. MCDA continues working with the City of Morgantown on the airport runway extension that will create the I-68 Commerce Park in 2023. The MCDA was also pleased to welcome the 17th Judicial Circuit Court Public Defender Corp. as a tenant in its 238 High St. building, which houses the Partnership offices and many other small businesses.

Furthermore, the Development Authority offers services to businesses in areas such as capital financing, employee recruitment and site and building selection, and provides local data to enhance what is available for businesses to thrive in our community.

The Partnership's newest organization, Main Street Morgantown, has been busy working to revitalize the downtown area and the Wharf District. With regular events such as the Art's Walk, Hops on the Mon and more, thousands of visitors are supporting our merchants in the district on a regular basis. We are excited about the relationships we have built with key stakeholders that will ensure our success as we continue to build and revitalize the downtown area.

The Campus Neighborhoods Revitalization Corp. (CNRC), also known as "Sunnyside Up," completed updates to its strategic plan last year that are critical for future growth and development. The CRNC continues to work on the beautification of neighborhoods near the WVU campus and in the future, it will expand beyond borders to continue to deliver the best possible place for both our students and our community to live, work and play.

Most importantly, business in the Morgantown area continues to grow. In fact, the Partnership attended or hosted 36 ribbon-cuttings in 2022. We currently have 538 members that comprise the Morgantown Area Partnership. These members include 17 Investor Partners that firmly believe in the concept of the Partnership and provide financial means to support our eight strategic initiatives. As we expand in 2023 with additional partner investors, we strive to stand united to achieve our initiatives, which include the following:

■ Transform the Morgantown Area into a nationally recognized center for innovation, research commercialization and entrepreneurship.

■ Effectively leverage existing businesses to support job creation and talent development.

■ Provide better public services through improved cohesion and collaboration of Morgantown area governments.

■ Advocate for confirmation of optimal land use opportunities and concurrent infrastructure needs in greater Morgantown.

■ Further enhance growth and investment in key job and activity centers.

■ Create a competitive climate for the development of diverse housing.

■ Market the Morgantown area to attract high-value employers and enhance local pride.

■ Maximize the access, attraction and impact of visitors to Greater Morgantown.

As you can see, the Partnership has experienced much success and growth over the last year. We thank you, our members and the community, because through the collective voice of the Partnership, we are creating opportunities that drive economic growth and prosperity for the entire Morgantown area.

With your continued involvement and support, the best is yet to come in 2023 and beyond. Thank you for everything you do.

Sarah C. Woodrum,
DrPH

Chairman of the Board
