A dusky sky hovered over the Skylar Neese memorial as 5 a.m. approached one day this past week.

Vantrease will stand before parole board

UPDATE

Kicked Ryan Diviney in head during fight

BY ALEX LANG

The Dominion Post

One man convicted of attacking Ryan Diviney is set to have his third chance at parole Wednesday.

Austin Vantrease, 23, is scheduled for a parole hearing at St. Mary's Correctional Center, where he is incarcerated. St. Mary's is in Pleasants County.

Vantrease was sentenced to two to 10 years in prison for malicious assault against Diviney.

In November 2009, an argument about the World Series escalated into a fight outside the Willey Street Dairy Mart. Prosecutors said Jonathan May punched Diviney, causing him to fall and strike his head. Vantrease then kicked the former WVU student in the head. May was convicted of battery and has been released from jail. Diviney was left comatose as a result of the altercation.

In July 2013, Vantrease was denied parole for a second time.

The parole board, which was made up of three women, determined that they didn't believe Vantrease was ready to go back into society. He told the board he didn't know why he kicked Diviney when he was already down.

5 factors to a strong U.S. economy

ANALYSIS

Associated Press

 ${\tt WASHINGTON-How~does}$ the U.S. economy do it?

Europe is floundering. China faces slower growth. Japan is struggling to sustain tentative gains. Yet the U.S. job market is humming, and the pace of economic growth is rising.

Here are five reasons the United States is outpacing other major economies:

An aggressive central bank

In December 2008, the Fed slashed short-term interest rates to near zero and has kept them there. Ultra-low loan rates have made it easier for individuals and businesses to borrow and spend.

Central Bank has been slower to respond to signs of economic distress among the 18 nations that share the euro currency.

Stronger banks

The United States moved faster than Europe to restore its banks' health after the financial crisis of 2008-'09. The U.S. government bailed out the financial system and subjected big banks to stress tests in 2009 to reveal their financial strength. By showing the banks to be surprisingly healthy, the stress tests helped restore confidence in the U.S. financial system.

More flexible economy

Economists say Japan and Europe need to undertake reforms to make their economies more flexible — more, in other

By contrast, the European words, like America's.

Europe needs to lift wage restrictions that prevent employers from cutting pay (rather than eliminating jobs) when times are bad.

Less budget-cutting

Weighed down by debt, many European countries took an ax to swelling budget deficits. They slashed pension benefits, raised taxes and cut civil servants' wages. The cuts devastated several European economies. The United States has done some budget cutting and raised taxes.

A roaring stock market

The Fed's easy-money policies ignited a world-beating U.S. stock market rally. During the past five years, U.S. stocks have easily outpaced shares in Europe, Japan and Hong Kong.

Family holds onto pit-spitting title

EAU CLAIRE, Mich. -When it comes to pit-spitting in southwestern Michigan, it's tough to beat the Krause family.

Brian Krause won the 41st International Cherry Pit Spitting Championship on Saturday with a distance of 80 feet, 8 inches.

His father, Rick, placed second with 77 feet, 7 1/2 inches. Brian's win made it 26 of 41 for the Krause family since Tree-Mendus Fruit Farm owner Herb Teichman launched the tournament in 1974 as a lark — but also to mark the region's tart cherry harvest.

Most union members have ties to government

Associated Press

WASHINGTON Unions representing government workers are expanding while organized labor has been shedding private sector members over the past half-century.

A majority of union members today have ties to a government entity, at the federal, state or local levels.

Roughly 1-in-3 public sector workers is a union member, compared with about 1-workforce, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Overall, 11.3 percent of wage and salary workers in the United States are unionized, down from a peak of 35 percent during the mid-1950s in the strong post-World War II recovery.

The typical union worker is more likely to be an educator, office worker or food or service industry employee rather than a construction worker, in-15 for the private sector toworker, electrician or mechanic. Far more women than men are among the union-label ranks.

> In a blow to public sector unions, the Supreme Court ruled this week that thousands of health care workers in Illinois who are paid by the state cannot be required to pay fees that help cover a union's cost of collective bargaining.

> The justices said the practice violates the First Amendment rights of non members who disagree with laws. The judge ordered a stances taken by unions.

The ruling was narrowly drawn, but it could reverberate through the universe of unions that represent government workers. The case involved home-care workers for disabled people who are paid with Medicaid funds administered by the state.

In June, a California judge declared unconstitutional the state's teacher tenure, dismissal and layoff stay of the decision, pending an appeal by the state and teachers union.

"The basic structure of the labor union movement has changed, reflecting changes in the economy,' said Ross Baker, a political science professor at Rutgers University. "Manufacturing is a diminishing segment of the economy. Also, a lot of the manufacturing that's being done today is being done nonunion."

Union members continue to be a powerful political force in politics, and Baker said he didn't see the role of unions diminishing. "I just think the colors of the collars are changing," Baker said.

In 2013, 14.5 million workers belonged to a union, about the same as the year before. In 1983, the first year comparable figures are available, there were 17.7 million union she expected to add a few more during the weekend.

Autumn Zundel, 7. was one of the riders. Her horse is 22-years-old and is named Drifter. Zundel said when she was little, her mom got her interested in horse riding.

Zundel said she likes to saddle her horse by herself and that it takes a few minutes to complete the task.

The horses are judged in two main categories. The show also features other activities for the participants.

"People come in to exhibit those horses in Western and Hunt Seat events," said Crystal Smith, a WVU teaching assistant professor in the equine management minor. "We also have some cookouts and family activities for some of the younger competing members that are here."

Smith said that the Western horses are more typical work horses; the Hunt Seat are more English, such as fox hunting, based.

The show continues today with the events kicking off at about 9 a.m. The show is free and open to the public.

Senate majority could rest on the sage grouse

Associated Press

DENVER — An obscure, chicken-sized bird, best known for its mating dance, could help determine whether Democrats or Republicans control the U.S. Senate in November.

The federal government will consider listing the greater sage grouse as an endangered species in 2015. Doing so could limit development, energy exploration, hunting and ranching on the 165 million acres of the bird's habitat across 11 Western states.

Apart from the potential disruption, economic which some officials in Western states discuss in tones usually reserved for natural disasters, specter of the bird's listing is reviving the debate about local vs. federal control and whether to develop or conserve the region's vast expanses of land.

Two Republican congressmen running for the U.S. Senate in Montana and Colorado, Steve Daines and Cory Gardner, are co-sponsoring legislation that would prevent the federal government from listing the bird for a decade as long as states try to protect it.

"Montanans want locally driven solutions," Daines said in an interview. "They don't want bureaucrats thousands of miles away in Washington, D.C., dictating what should happen."

Environmentalists and the two Democratic senators being challenged, John Walsh in A Gunnison sage grouse fans its tail feathers near Gunnison, Colo.

Montana and Mark Udall in Colorado, oppose the idea. They say they don't want a listing, either, but that the threat of one is needed to push states to protect the bird.

"A bill like what some in the House are proposing that would delay listing the bird would actually undermine locally driven efforts," Udall spokesman Mike Saccone said.

The greater sage grouse once roamed widely across the sagebrush plateaus of the West's interior.

Livestock grazing eroded the bristly plant that the bird depends upon, development chopped up its habitat and energy exploration erected towers that chased it away from its home range.

Rachel Carson warned in 1962 of the bird's possible demise in "Silent Spring," her environmental book.

Three environmental groups sued to force the federal government to protect the bird after the government declined to list it as endangered in 2005. In a 2010 settlement, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agreed to decide on listing by September 2015.

A firefighter puts out hot spots in a wildfire recently in the Julian, Calif., area.

California wildfire destroys eight homes; others rage

Associated Press

COLLINSVILLE, Calif. – A fire tore through a Northern California community, destroying eight homes and damaging three more over the holiday weekend that has firefighters throughout California hard at work.

Nobody was injured in the Friday afternoon blaze in the small community of Collinsville along the Sacramento River, about 60 miles east of San Francisco, Chief Joe Rosewall of the Montezuma Fire District in Solano County said Saturday.

The fire is out, but 25 residents are without homes and it caused an estimated $2.5 million in damage, Rosewall said.

State fire officials say they were battling several fires throughout California and expect dry conditions to keep them busy over the July 4 weekend. The blazes have led to injuries of some firefighters, destruction of homes, evacuations and cancellation of some July 4 events.

Also in Northern California, the Monticello Fire in Yolo County started Friday afternoon and has consumed nearly 8 square miles on the southeast shore of Lake Barryessa, about an hour west of Sacramento. At least 50 homes had been evacuated, and the fire is 15 percent contained, state fire spokesman Daniel Berlant said.

The Butts Fire in Napa and Lake counties, northwest of Lake Barryessa, started Tuesday and has burned nearly 7 square miles. The flames led to minor injuries of three firefighters and destroyed two homes, state fire officials said. It was 70 percent contained.

In Southern California, a fire near the mountain town of Julian that had destroyed two homes was 90 percent contained Saturday after burning about 220 acres.

Four firefighters were injured, state fire Capt. Kendal Bortisser said. The extent of their injuries wasn't immediately clear, and the cause of the fire in central San Diego County was under investigation.

Newtown shooting victim's animal shelter dream turning real HARTFORD. Conn. -Before she was killed in the Newtown school massacre 6-year-old Catherine Violet Hubbard raised money from returnable bottles and cans to buy bones for dogs at the pound and designed business cards for an imaginary animal shelter, listing herself as "caretaker."

Her pretend animal shelter is now on track to become a reality as the state prepares to transfer 34 acres of a former psychiatric facility to a foundation raising money to build an animal sanctuary to honor the life of the little girl who was one of 20 firstgraders killed in the 2012 Sandy Hook Elementary School shooting. "It was just in her soul," said Jenny Hubbard, describing her late daughter's love of animals. "She didn't care if it was fuzzy or slimy." Plans for the sanctuary in her name include a shelter and adoption center for cats and dogs, a refuge for farm and work animals, and a rescue and release program for injured, native wildlife. Plans also include a veterinarian clinic and a each have business backwelcome center where educational programs will be held. The goal is to open the main building in Newtown in 2016.

Gov. Dannel P. Malloy recently signed legislation instructing the Department of Agriculture to convey the state land to the private Catherine Violet Hubbard Foundation set up by her parents. Several steps remain before Attorney General George Jepsen can sign off on the final transfer.

For Jenny Hubbard and her husband, Matt, who grounds and wrote the sanctuary's business plan, the project has been both a healing and humbling experience. They've been amazed by the outpouring of support. To date, $800,000 has been donated, even though formal fundraising efforts have not yet begun.

A mistaken Google search ultimately led to the idea for the sanctuary. Tasked with the unimaginable job of writing their 6year-old's obituary, the Hubbards decided to ask people to donate money in lieu of flowers to the local animal control center.

But as a friend looked up the address, they instead discovered The Animal Center, a small, nonprofit group of volunteers who provide foster homes to stray cats and dogs until permanent homes can be found. Harmony Verna, the group's vice president, remembers getting a call from the Hubbards, asking if the center would mind being listed in Catherine's obituary. Within two weeks, $150,000 had been donated in the little girl's name.

NATO: No new members for now

BRUSSELS — Faced with a newly aggressive Russia, NATO has been mulling how to react, but it is ruling out one option: Rapid expansion.

Four would-be members, including the former Soviet republic of Georgia, have been informed that admission to NATO isn't in the cards anytime soon. For some, that means dashed hopes. Macedonia's foreign minister told The Associated Press in a statement it was a "step backward."

The bottom line: The North Atlantic Treaty Organization, celebrating important anniversaries this year of a dozen nations joining its ranks, will welcome no new members when President Barack Obama and other leaders convene for a summit in Wales, in early September.

Analysts say that NATO members are worried about granting, or being perceived as granting, seNo new members for the present curity guarantees that could quickly be tested by Russia. That's particularly true of Georgia, which has been waiting since 2008 for the U.S.-led military alliance to make good on its promise of admission.

Before taking over Crimea from Ukraine, Russia invaded and occupied two regions of Georgia nearly six years ago and NATO is reluctant to take any action that might provoke a riposte from Moscow.

"The conflict Ukraine has made it clear to them at NATO they have to be careful, both about security commitments and credibility," said Liana Fix, an associate fellow at the German Council on Foreign Relations. "If you give Georgia their membership action plan but don't defend them if something happens, what does it say about your credibility?'

NATO won't publicly hang up the "No Vacancy"

Anders Fogh Rasmussen, the alliance's secretary general, proclaimed recently that "NATO's door remains open. And no third country has a veto over NATO enlargement."

But even before Crimea's annexation, some NATO countries were experiencing "enlargement exhaustion" and had become reluctant to increase the alliance's membership rolls, said Jorge Benitez, senior fellow for trans-Atlantic security at the Atlantic Council, a Washington, D.C.-based think tank.

Post-Crimea, "the issues are much bigger," Benitez said. "The question is, how much insecurity would you add to the alliance versus how much security would you bring to the alliance?"

Video allegedly shows extremist leader in Iraq

Associated Press

BAGHDAD — A man purporting to be the leader of the Sunni extremist group that declared an Islamic state in territory it controls in Iraq and Syria made what would be his first public appearance. He delivered a sermon at a mosque in a city in Iraq, according to a video posted Saturday.

The 21-minute video that is said to show Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi, the head of the Islamic State group, was reportedly filmed on Friday at the Great Mosque in the northern city of Mosul. It was released on at least two websites known to be used by the organization. It bore the logo of its media arm, but it was not possible to independently verify whether the person shown was indeed al-Baghdadi.

There are only a few known photographs of al-Baghdadi, an Iraqi militant believed to be in his early 40s with a $10 million U.S. bounty on his head. Since taking the reins of the group in 2010, he has transformed it from a local branch of al-Qaida into an independent transnational military force.

Al-Baghdadi's purported appearance in Mosul, a city of some 2 million that the militants seized last month, came five days after his group declared the establishment of an Islamic state, or caliphate, in the territories it seized in Iraq and Syria. The group proclaimed al-Baghdadi the leader of its state and demanded that all Muslims pledge allegiance to him.

In the video, the man said to be al-Baghdadi says that 'the mujahedeen have been rewarded victory by God after years of jihad, and they were able to achieve their aim and hurried to announce the caliphate and choose the Imam," referring to the leader.

Speaking in classical Arabic with little emotion, he outlines a vision that emphasizes holy war, the implementation of a strict interpretation of Islamic law, and the philosophy that the establishment of an Islamic caliphate is a duty incumbent on all Muslims.

Finnish couple wins 'wife carrying' race

Associated Press

HELSINKI — A Finnish couple has narrowly won the 19th World Wife Carrying Championships — a quirky competition in which men race to be the fastest while carrying a female teammate.

Ville Parviainen and Janette Oksman cleared the grueling 278-yard obstacle course in 63.75 seconds on Saturday, less than a second ahead of Britain's Rich Blake Smith and Anna Marguerite Smith.

Thirty-six couples from a dozen countries, including Australia, Japan, and the United States, took part in the race, which was held in the central Finnish municipality of Sonkajarvi, north of the capital, Helsinki.

The rules stipulate that the woman must be over 17 years of age and weigh at least 108 pounds. Despite the event's name, couples don't have to be married, and organizers say male contestants could "borrow a neighbor's wife" if they didn't have a female companion.

The men can carry their teammate in various ways, though a popular method is for the woman to hang upside-down with her legs around the male contestant's shoulders.

Finland has established itself as a prime venue for unusual events such as international air guitar, swamp soccer and mobile phone throwing competitions.

Militant: Jordan not immune to violence

Associated Press

MAAN, Jordan — An al-Qaida linked Jordanian militant leader warned on Friday that the kingdom was "not immune" to the chaos befalling neighboring countries, although he acknowledged that a Sunni extremist group's recent declaration of a caliphate spanning Syria and Iraq was threatening to divide the jihadi movement.

Mohammed al-Shalabi, a senior leader of ultraconservative Muslims known as Salafis in Jordan, told The Associated Press that the fighting between rival militant factions in Syria has already undermined the battle against President Bashar Assad.

Al-Shalabi, who spent 11 years in Jordanian jails on charges including plotting to attack a U.S. military base in the kingdom, said Jordanian Salafis have stopped sending their supporters to join the rebel ranks in Syria, fearing they will end up fighting other Muslims. More than 1,600 Jordanian have fought in Syria and 250 of them have been killed, al-Shalabi said.

Al-Shalabi spoke in a rare interview with a Western media organization at his home on the outskirts of the southern city of Maan, an impoverished area that has seen protests by supporters of the Islamic State group that has seized large swaths of territory in Iraq and Syria and announced it has established a longsought Muslim caliphate. The announcement has been rejected and even derided by many of the rival Islamic rebel factions fighting in Syria.

Al-Shalabi urged Jordan -a U.S. ally that relies heavily on donations from the U.S. and oil-rich Gulf Arabs to keep its fragile economy afloat — to implement Islamic Shariah laws and more balanced economic and social policies.

4. If I were king for the day, I would: Grant everyone three wishes!

5. Striking success: I have written more than 200 songs and am forever in pursuit of that No. 1 hit. More importantly, I have enjoyed seeing the life successes of my sons. Their happiness is my joy!

6. Striking failure: It was hard experiencing the demise of the old Short Brothers Band. Bittersweet, though, as I wouldn't trade the experiences of it all — and it would not have brought me to where I am now in enjoying my success as a soloist, and as a member of the Brother Short Band.

7. Major pet peeve: I can't bear witnessing injustice in this world.

8. Favorite childhood memory: Fishing with my Dad and uncles at Yokum's campground at Seneca Rocks. I also have very fond memories of first learning to play guitar.

Labor creates new arm for fundraising

Associated Press

CHARLESTON — West Virginia organized labor has created a new independent fundraising arm ahead of the November general election.

According to a filing with the Federal Election Commission, the West Virginia AFL-CIO created the new federal political action committee "Honest West Virginians" in late June.

AFL-CIO treasurer Josh Sword said that the group felt it needed to fight the flow of outside money affecting federal elections in West Virginia.

The AFL-CIO already has a state-level political arm, called the Committee on Political Education or AFL-CIO COPE. Sword said he's focusing on the federal PAC now.

'I don't think people are liable to forget it'

Officials reflect on Neese case

BY ALEX LANG The Dominion Post

It wasn't just family and friends of Skylar Neese who have felt a range of emotions during the past two years.

There are also investigators and prosecutors who have been close to the case for months and won't soon forget the details.

Vic Propst was involved in the early stages of the investigation.

In July 2012, Skylar left her Star City apartment and met with Shelia Eddy and Rachel Shoaf. The three drove to Pennsylvania, where Eddy and Shoaf attacked and stabbed Skylar to death. They left her body in the woods. She wasn't found until months later.

Propst said the case started as one of a runaway, but it took law enforcement

Star City Police Chief down an unexpected path. Propst said the case was one of the saddest that he has had to work, and he is > glad it is resolved. Eddy and Shoaf eventually came forward and took responsibility for their action, but much sense hasn't been made of the case, Propst said. He added it seems the crime was committed because the girls didn't want to be friends any more.

"People are still searching for other motives," he said. "It doesn't seem to answer any questions."

The case has removed the words "kid's stuff" from Propst's vocabulary, he said. He used to qualify events such as runaways and youngsters partying under that umbrella, but doesn't since the Neese case.

As time passes since the murder, Propst said he believes thoughts may fade, but doesn't believe the case will disappear from the community's collective mind.

Monongalia County Prosecutor Marcia Ashdown agreed, and said it might be pushed to the back of people's minds, but nobody will forget it.

"I don't think people are liable to forget it," she said.

Each murder case has its own unique set of circumstances and Ashdown said they aren't forgotten. But, the Neese case was at a high level because of its headline-grabbing nature and the fact she was killed by friends.

things have While calmed down for the Neese family regarding the criminal proceedings, Ashdown said they will continue to experience the case.

"It's never over for them," she said.

With today marking two years since Skylar was killed, Ashdown said it doesn't feel that way because of the length of the investigation and the legal hearings that followed.

"You know it almost seems longer because it was such a long process,"

"It's two years of pure hell we've been through. and I mean pure hell,' Dave Neese said. "Unless you had something like this happen to you before, you'll never understand what we went through and still are going through every day.

"When I die, I better go to heaven because I sure lived hell on earth," Skylar's dad said.

Today marks two years since Skylar left through her bedroom window to meet with Rachel Shoaf and Shelia Eddy. It was that night that the three supposed friends — and classmates at University High School — left to drive around and smoke marijuana.

But, Shoaf and Eddy had other ideas. Based on information from their plea hearings, they planned to kill Skylar for months, and packed the supplies they would need to do so.

The three drove to Pennsylvania, where Shoaf and Eddy agreed to attack at a predetermined signal.

They used kitchen knives to stab Skylar, even as she tried to flee. They stood over her as she drew her last breath. They also tried to conceal the crime and left Skylar's body in a wooded area - information all released by the county prosecutor's office during hearings.

The search

Skylar was initially thought to be a missing person and a months-long search ensued. Tips came in about her possible whereabouts, but none were accurate. Shoaf and Eddy expressed concern though social media and even assisted in the search for their friend.

Shoaf's story began to change and eventually she confessed to police about what really happened. She also provided details on the locations of Skylar's remains, which led police to discover her body in the wooded area that has become the memorial.

The two girls pleaded guilty to their acts — Eddy to first-degree murder and Shoaf to second-degree and were sentenced earlier this year.

Eddy received life in prison with mercy, meaning she will be eligible for parole after 15 years.

She was sent to Lakin Correctional Center, the state's only jail for women. Shoaf was sentenced to 30 years in prison and is awaiting transfer Lakin.

She will be eligible for parole after 10 years.

Apology not accepted

It was during Shoaf's sentencing hearing, that either girl first spoke publicly about that night.

"I'm so sorry," she said during the sentencing, turning to face the Neese family. "I hurt the Neese family as well as Skylar. "May God bring eternal peace to Skylar and the Neese family."

It was an apology that Dave Neese doesn't buy.

"I was thinking, 'Don't apologize to me you sicko,' " he recalled about four months after the hearing. "You apologize for stepping on someone's toes or you apologize for spilling someone's drink. You don't apologize for murdering someone in the first degree. Something you thought about doing for a year, then you carry it out.

"You don't say you're sorry for that 'cause you're not. You sure as hell weren't sorry July 6 when you did it."

Difficult days

Sitting in the courtroom during the proceedings wasn't easy, Neese said. He added that Eddy's hearing was more difficult because he and Mary knew her better. They treated her like their own daughter and they loved her.

It also hurt that Eddy came to court smiling and in a jovial mood.

"I didn't see anything funny about it," Neese said. "You're there because you killed somebody and you're laughing? She's a sick, sick individual."

were other There thoughts running through Neese's mind during the proceedings and it was court security that prevented him from trying to stop the smiling. He admitted that without court security there he would have likely attacked the teens

"They both deserve my hands around their necks," he said.

If he had the chance to face his daughter's killers today, Neese said he didn't believe he would sav anvthing to them — his instincts would take over.

"No matter what I would say or what I would think, my reactions would take over and I'd just want to kill her. That's horrible to say, but it's true."

'It ain't good enough'

Neese was disappointed with the court and its decisions made at the hearings. He said he was upset that Monongalia County Circuit Court Judge Russell Clawges only sentenced Shoaf to 30 years instead of the maximum 40-year imprisonment.

He also said he has looked at other states where juveniles have committed murder.

He found that some face punishment as adults and are sentenced to life or half a century in prison.

That left him questioning West Virginia's poli-

"For God's sake, what's wrong with our legal system?" he asked.

He also questions God. Neese said Skylar went to church, but he never went all that much. He said he believed in God before the murder and hasn't written God off completely, but the two have "issues.'

"I feel like God's let me down," Neese said.

There is also a phrase that Neese said he and Mary hate to hear there is a reason for the murder.

Neese said there is no reason for it — a car wreck he could believe there was a reason, but not murder. "People keep saying

The Skylar Neese memorial site, in Pennsylvania, sits near where her body was found.

God has a reason, I don't care what his reason is, it ain't good enough.'

No reason matters

Neese called the two killers a "waste of human

He said he is happy to see them locked up. He has heard people speculate on reasons behind the motive, but said he hasn't heard one that answers his questions about what happened July 6, 2012, and he won't accept one.

"I don't care what the reason is," he said. "It's not good enough."

Neese said that the Shoaf and Eddy families haven't reached out to him or his wife. He believes they could have a conversation that might provide some insight into what the killers were thinking that night, two years ago.

It's been two years of reliving the details each day, Neese said.

"We really haven't gotten back to some kind of normal. I really don't know what normal is," Neese said. "It's been two vears almost, and it seems like yesterday. Time just flew. All this time without my daughter, you would have thought time would just stop, but it hasn't."

Part of the reason time has flown is because of requests for the Neeses to share their story. The incident has gained local, state, regional, national and international attention. Neese admitted that it does get tiresome sitting through all the interviews, but he does it so people can learn the truth. "I want everybody to know the truth of what those two evil witches did," he said.

Skylar's killing has also provided one important lesson, Neese said. He implored parents to learn from what happened to him.

Know who your children are hanging out with, and know their par-

That day was pretty tough, Neese said. He said he walked the rail-trail and did everything he could to get his mind off the significance of the day. But, he spent the entire day crying.

Graduation day was similar in pain to the day when investigators told the family they believed they found Skylar's remains, Neese said.

He said he and Mary often trade tough days and that the night of UHS's prom was tough for Skylar's mom. He said they cry on each other's shoulders and that it has put a strain on their marriage. But, they each have a strength that helps them

Nothing's easy

Random comments from strangers can cause memories and emotions to surface. Neese recalled a recent day at work when a woman approached and said she prayed for him. It was something he had heard before, but this time he had to head to a back room and cry.

"Then I walk back and hear 'Sweet Child of Mine'... playing and that just went through me like a thorn in my side," he

People have said that dealing with the grief gets easier with time, but Neese said it hasn't for them. There are days that are tougher.

If he could go back two years, Neese would have a simple message for his daughter.

"I love you," he said, taking a long pause. "That's about it."

He continued, "I'd tell her, 'Me and your mother miss her so bad. We both love her to death and I'm sorry those evil little witches did this to you. It's not fair.' "

Neese said he wants people to remember a few things about Skylar.

"The only thing I want people to remember is that gorgeous little smile, that bubbly little personality and the good things she brought to everyone's life. No one that was friends with her, or her parents, aunts, uncles or whatever will ever forget her."

Nicole Brown Simpson's father, Louis, dies at 90

Associated Press

DANA POINT, Calif. — Louis Brown Jr., the father of O.J. Simpson's exwife Nicole Brown Simpson, has died at his Southern California home, a family attorney said Saturday. He was 90.

Brown died Thursday, in the seaside community of Dana Point, attorney Natasha Roit said in an email. A statement issued on behalf of the family did not include a cause of death.

Brown was the father of Nicole Brown Simpson, who was slashed to death in 1994 with friend Ronald Goldman. Her former husband, a football great, was acquitted of murder in the high-profile murder trial, which was televised live.

A civil jury found O.J. Simpson liable in 1997 for the deaths of his ex-wife and Goldman, providing a moral victory for grieving relatives who thought he got away with murder.

Louis Brown, who sat stone still as the verdict was announced, stood and smiled afterward. "I want to get outside and scream," he told the AP at the time. The jury awarded $33.5 million in damages.

Brown and his daughter Denise founded a charitable foundation in his slain daughter's name to raise awareness of domestic violence and increase funding for assistance.

Brown served in World War II as a pilot and married in Switzerland after the war, the statement said.

His wife, Judi, and children were with him when he died. "It was his wish to remain in his home with those he loved," Roit said.

Birthday girl asks friend to bring second present

DEAR ABBY: I am planning to attend a birthday party for my friend "Sophia" who is turning 50. When I mentioned to her that I would be shopping for her birthday gift, she asked that while I was shopping for her, that I also pick up a gift for her friend "Stacy."

I have met Stacy only a few times, and I think it was extremely nervy for Sophia to ask me to do it. The party is only for her, and I don't see the connection.

Sophia has done this in the past, and I'm trying to think of a way to tell her I'd rather not buy a gift for her friend. How should I handle this? — NO LONGER A DOORMAT

DEAR NO LONGER A DOORMAT: Tell Sophia with a smile that you are not close to Stacy, don't know her taste and do not feel comfortable shopping for her. Smiling when you say it should prevent your refusal from appearing confrontational.

P.S. I agree she had a lot of nerve to ask.

DEAR ABBY: We went out to dinner with another couple. The wives are psychiatric nurses; the husbands are a banker and a business owner. All of us are accustomed to dealing with "sensitive" issues. A woman at the table next to ours went to the ladies' room. When she returned, a short "train" of toilet paper was caught in the waistband of her slacks. It was very obvious. If this should ever happen again, what if anything — should I do? — MR. MANNERS IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR MR. MAN-NERS: Imagine if the person with the paper trail was you or your wife. Would you want to know, so that when you got up to leave the restaurant all eyes didn't follow you out? A discreet way to have let the woman know there was a problem would have been for you or your wife to have written her a note, and given it to her server to pass to her. That way, she would know there was a problem with the least amount of embarrassment.

My apartment needs work ... suggestions?

SOME people can pull off decorating.

I'm not one of them.

My friend Laura once draped a vintage dress over a lamp. Completely without effort, she created something that looked elegant and chic.

If I did that, people would talk. They'd ask: "You own a dress?" Then they'd tell me my laundry was dry and I could put it away. Lately, I've been perusing magazines about decorating with flea market finds.

In truth, much of my net worth is flea market finds.

In magazines, a typical human drops an old mailbox in among designer furniture and VOILA! Décor is born.

Despite my attempts at such home decorating, my apartment looks more like an actual flea market than a well-designed home.

I'm in awe of those who can make something beautiful out of someone else's trash. I'm enamored of glossy magazines filled with brilliant décor purchased for just pennies on the dollar.

And then there are the collections, carefully displayed in every room, bringing various settings to life with vibrant color.

People collect cups. People collect plates. People collect corkscrews.

Ashtrays are also being amassed by those who know what they're doing.

Ashtrays, a magazine told me, are "proportioned to act as everything from nut dishes to jewelry holders."

Who knew?

One woman collects vintage hangers. Another is tuned into vintage radios and has them all over her home.

In another dwelling, a carefully crafted cabinet holds Pez dispensers.

Plop a rusty old scale on the kitchen counter and wow your neighbors.

Really? It doesn't work for me. First, I don't have enough counter space, and even if I did, it wouldn't look artsy in my kitchen.

It would just look rusty.

A collection of industrial cogs on the living room wall?

I'd be crushed if they fell off. I am not the adventurous type, I'm afraid.

I stumbled upon an article online recently with countless flea market and thrift store paintings augmented with monsters. That's clever upcycling — take that tired, pre-framed portrait and add an ogre. Art is born — art that can enhance your home décor.

Believe me, my home décor needs all the enhancing it can get.

And art might not be a bad place to start. When I moved into my two-bedroom apartment about five years ago, I was in no hurry to hang things on the walls. I have one framed something — undoubtedly a concert poster — in my office and one in my living room.

The office also contains a closet filled with things that were meant to be hung on walls. As I said, I was in no hurry.

In the plethora of stylish homes featured in junk-sale decorating magazines, you'll see vintage photographs framed and grouped. You'll see pressed flowers, matted and framed, alongside a bird cage and a recycled door. Somehow those who decorate thus make it look like fine art.

Police: Unconscious man found along road

Relative said victim's four-wheeler missing

BY ALEX LANG The Dominion Post

The Monongalia County Sheriff's Department is investigating a suspected assault that a relative said left the victim with broken bones, cuts and on a breathing tube.

According to a news release from the department: Deputies were called to Morgans Run area of Cheat Lake, where they found an unresponsive man along the side of the road. He was taken to Ruby Memorial Hospital and appeared to be an assault victim.

His name and condition were not released to protect his privacy. A relative said the man was found at about 10:30 a.m. on July 4. He had several cuts that needed stitches, a few fractures to his head and was on a breathing tube. The relative said the victim had motor skills and did respond to pain.

"I was shocked," the relative said about seeing him.

The victim left home late on July 3, the victim said. She added he had been drinking, but not excessively. He left with his four-wheeler and headed to a party area, the victim said.

The relative said she believed the victim was staying the night with his girlfriend and the girlfriend believed he was staying with his family. The next morning, the family learned that he was taken to the hospital.

Family identified the victim at the hospital, the relative said.

The four-wheeler and its keys are missing, the relative said. She added that the victim is not the type of person to go out and start a fight. The man also had injuries to his hand, which led the family to believe that he tried to defend himself.

The relative said she was "heartbroken" over the situation and just wants justice to be served.

UPDATE

Sam's Club: Ex-worker knew policy

Former employee: I was discriminated against

The Dominion Post

Sam's Club argues that a former employee was fired for her own actions and that its antidiscrimination policies were made available.

Myrtle Forquer filed suit against Wal-Mart and a Sam's Club manager earlier this year. Forquer argued that she lost her job as bakery team leader at the University Town Centre Sam's Club in July 2013 after being confronted over her views on the president's background, religious opinions and views on gay and lesbian couples.

Wal-Mart is the parent company to Sam's Club.

In its response, filed in Monongalia County Circuit Court, Sam's East Inc. asked to replace Wal-Mart as a defendant, as it operates the Granville store.

The company denies many of the allegations made in the lawsuit but said Forquer was asked about comments made in the workplace. She was fired for gross misconduct for discriminatory comments, the response said.

Sam's Club denied that age, gender or religious affiliation had any bearing on her termination.

Forquer said she was asked if she said anything about gays. Muslims or people on government assistance, to which she responded "no." She was also asked if she said anything about President Barack Obama being black, to which she answered he is biracial because she understood his mother is white.

The day after the confrontation, Forquer was fired for gross misconduct, including discrimination for her remarks regarding Obama's ethnicity.

The employer knew of Forquer's Christian beliefs as she wore clothing and jewelry that displayed her faith, according to the initial suit.

The complaint says the gross misconduct was, at best, a pretext for firing Forquer, and the motivating factors were actually gender, age and religious discrimination. Forquer was replaced by a 23-year-old who had no qualifications or prior experience. The suit calls the situation "blatant" age discrimination. She also suffered gender discrimination after a male employee received a six-day suspension dio traffic: Shortly before 5 p.m., Monongalia County Sheriff's deputies were dispatched to the parking lot for a report of a strong armed robbery.

Smokers, can e-cigarettes save money?

RICHMOND, Va. — It's difficult to say yet if electronic cigarettes are less harmful than regular fireand-tobacco smokes, but they can save smokers hundreds or even thousands of dollars a year.

Some in the growing industry are touting the battery-powered nicotine sticks as a way for smokers to save money in the face of rising taxes and prices for tobacco cigarettes. But it may not stay that way for long as states are increasingly looking to tax ecigarettes as they tax other tobacco products.

A look at the costs of smokes and e-cigarettes shows the savings can vary a lot, depending on state cigarette taxes and the brand and style of ecigarette used. But the bottom line is that e-cigarettes can generally make an expensive addiction cheaper.

A note on health: None of this takes into consideration the potential costs of any health effects from nicotine addiction, which can be huge. Clearly, the way to save the most money is to kick nicotine entirely. And taking up either habit for the first time isn't going to be good for your wallet.

The basics of E-cigs

The devices heat a liquid nicotine solution, creating vapor that users inhale. Smokers like them because the vapor looks like smoke but doesn't contain the thousands of chemicals, tar or odor of regular cigarettes.

Scientists haven't finished much research on ecigarettes, and the studies that have been done on their safety or ability to help smokers quit have been inconclusive.

But cost is increasingly becoming part of the equation as the average pack of cigarettes around the country tops $6.15, according to the Federation of Tax Administrators.

Doing the math

Smoking is expensive. A pack-a-day smoker spend anywhere from $1,500 a year in a low-tax state, all the way to about $5,000 in New York City, where a pack can run $13. On average across the country, the tab comes to about $2,250 a year.

The first consideration for someone looking to switch is whether to use disposable models or a refillable. The refillable models promise more savings in exchange for a bigger upfront investment.

WVU looks to advance urban forestry

WILDLIFE HABITAT, timber management go hand-in-hand, Page 7-C

Associated Press

BLACKSBURG, Va. — A multistate team from universities in West Virginia, Virginia and Maryland are working to advance the profession of urban forestry.

The team led by researchers at Virginia Tech launched Urban Forestry 2020. The project aims to examine the challenges faced by the urban forestry profession and devise strategies for advancing the profession.

The project also includes representatives from WVU, Virginia State University and the University of Maryland. It is partially funded by the U.S. Forest Service.

Urban forestry is the management of trees and green spaces in communities to enhance quality of life and protect the environment. Team officials said that while the profession has advanced rapidly over the past 20 years, there are many issues that need to be faced to move it forward.

"The beauty of the urban forestry profession is its interdisciplinary nature," said Susan Day, associate professor of urban forestry at Virginia Tech and the project's investigator: "People from diverse backgrounds work together to solve problems with a critical urban natural resource that has a big impact on our day-to-day lives. But the field's interdisciplinary nature is also a challenge when it comes to networking and education, and the profession is experiencing some growing pains."

The team has assembled a committee to help guide the project, bringing together leaders in urban forestry and related fields like urban planning, landscape architecture and civil engineering to examine recruitment into urban forestry, accreditation of university urban forestry degree programs, and professional credentialing and networking of urban foresters.

West Virginia camp to teach sewing skills to kids

BY LISA SHREWSBERRY

The Register-Herald

BECKLEY — Remember the movie "Pretty in Pink"? Girls in the '80s envied not only Molly Ringwald's natural pout, but her character Andie Walsh's ability to take an old dress, a pair of shears and a sewing machine to transform a thrift store castoff into possibly the most iconic prom/revenge frock of all time.

Filmmaker John Hughes' only brat pack movie where the conflict resolution hinged on haute couture (she gets the guy) resonated with a teenage Darci McKinnon — as it did with a generation impressed by unabashed creativity.

"I went to a performing arts high school in Cincinnati. Think 'Fame' because our school was based on the New York Performing Arts School model," McKinnon said.

Her school's dances had polka dotted tuxedo his date made (with the complimentary polka dotted dress designed in reverse color scheme).

"Whose prom does that now?" she asks. Her progressive school experience and involvement in theater and costuming actually earned her a part as an extra in teen idol Ringwald's "Fresh Horses" — a cinematic flop, but hey, "I got to meet Molly!"

Back to the generation at hand and McKinnon, now a Raleigh County Schools bus driver with a music degree and a minister husband, is returning the lost art of sewing to her favorite tribe — 'tweens and teenagers — at the Beckley Art Center, Cynthia Bickey Art Gallery. Her summer primer in basic hand and machine sewing skills is called "Camp Couture."

Through it, McKinnon

the guy who showed up in a intends to empower children ages 10 and up with the ability to design and sew. Beginning with pajama pants and advancing from there, McKinnon will instruct students in choosing their own patterns and materials, manipulating a sewing machine, taking measurements, hemming and other techniques as time allows.

> Students will select a pattern, too, for an article of clothing to tackle and construct from scratch. Depending on the popularity of her first camp attempt, McKinnon plans to bring more sewing workshops for youth and adults to Beckley Art Center.

> "Technology has improved the fabrics that are out there. People are making their own swimsuits, pants, shirts; think of the popularity of shows like 'Project Runway,'" pointed out.

ed States has decreased from 5 million in the 1940s to 2.5 million now. In a fiveyear period between 2006 and 2011, beekeepers reported annual losses of hives averaging 33 percent each year.

Herbert Everhart, who co-owns Eversweet Apiaries in Kearneysville with Ed Burwell, has experienced hive loss — although not necessarily CCD — in the past.

Everhart said he began keeping bees 12 years ago after a neighbor who was keeping bees as a hobby could no longer care for his hive.

Everhart bought a second hive when he was starting out, and lost both before he realized there was more to beekeeping than he had first thought. He took a class, and now spends much of his time giving advice to new beekeepers.

"More hives are lost by the backyard beekeeper or the beekeepers that run maybe 100 hives or so, and it's because of poor management," Everhart said. "Looking back to the very beginning, when I lost my hives, I didn't want to see other people lose theirs. That's where I got my passion for teaching beekeeping. I wanted to save those people the same heartache. Even when we find a hive that died over the winter, it still hurts just as much as if we had only two hives.'

In addition to raising bees and producing honey, Eversweet Apiaries sells beekeeping supplies, and Everhart offers advice for free.

Md. sisters headed to U.S. rodeo competition

BY GRACE TOOHEY The Frederick News-Post

MYERSVILLE, Md. — Morgan and Lauren Keeney sparkle as they expertly navigate the rodeo ring — literally, because they've got bling.

The sisters from Myersville find every opportunity to spice up their ensemble, including glittery cowboy boots, large belt buckles (the rodeo equivalent of trophies), jeweled breastplates for their horses and shimmering belts.

"Some people don't like bling," Lauren said. "But we do."

But once they mount their horses, they mean business. In 2013, the Keeneys joined Maryland's first high school rodeo team, and they both did well enough in competitions to earn spots in the National High School Finals Rodeo beginning July 13 in Rock Springs, Wyo. Morgan also won Mary-

In Wyoming, Morgan, 17. and Lauren, 14. will compete in both barrel racing and pole bending. Lauren also recently picked up goat tying.

Barrel racers complete a clover-shaped pattern riding on their horse, while pole benders try to weave through six poles as they ride. Both are measured by time. Goat tying is a bit different, where riders dismount from their horses to tie together three legs of a tethered goat as quickly as

Philadelphia fire may have begun in couch

PHILADELPHIA — A fire that raced through a row of two-story homes in southwest Philadelphia early Saturday, killing three 4-yearolds and a baby. The fire also engulfed at least 10 houses, may have started in a couch on a porch, officials said.

The blaze began shortly before 3 a.m. and was brought under control in about an hour, fire officials said. At least eight row homes were completely gutted, leaving behind only charred frames.

A fire department dispatcher identified the victims as 4-year-old twin girls, a 4-year-old boy and a month-old boy. The relationship between the twins and the two boys was unclear. Four other people were injured.

 ${\bf Jeff} \quad {\bf Boone} \quad {\bf told} \quad {\bf \it The}$ Philadelphia Inquirer that he saw a couch on fire on the porch of a house about five doors down from his residence and heard children screaming.

The flames spread across porches so fast, he said, that "it looked like someone had a flamethrower and just shot it all across."

The 27-year-old Boone said he called 911 and bolted out of his house to try to save his neighbors.

"I was running, screaming, telling everybody, 'Get up! Yo, get yo! Go!' " he said.

Milton Musa told the newspaper his roommate woke him up and said their home was on fire. Once outside, Musa said, he saw two children hanging from a neighbor's window.

"I could see they weren't strong, and I was afraid they'd fall to the cement," Musa said. "So I went underneath them, let them fall on my back and carried them away."

He wiped away tears as he recalled the intense moments as the blaze swept through the neighborhood. "Everyone was running for their lives," he said. "I've lost everything. My paperwork, my documents, my house. Everything."

A preliminary investigation indicated the blaze started in a couch at one home and spread quickly to other residences. The investigation will continue.

"This is a tragic, tragic day for the city of Philadelphia. Tragic," Fire Commissioner Derrick Sawyer said. "We lost four children today.'

First lady fights GOP on school lunch rules

Associated Press

WASHINGTON First ladies typically avoid getting into public scraps, but Michelle Obama has jumped into perhaps her biggest battle yet.

She's fighting a House Republican effort to soften a central part of her prized anti-childhood obesity campaign and she said she's ready "to fight until the bitter end."

Mrs. Obama even mocked the GOP effort in an opinion column and argued her case before her Twitter followers.

"Remember a few years ago when Congress declared that the sauce on a slice of pizza should count as a vegetable in school lunches?" wrote in The New York Times. "You don't have to be a nutritionist to know that this doesn't make much sense. Yet we're seeing the same thing happening again with these new efforts to lower nutrition standards in our schools."

Mrs. Obama lobbied largely behind the scenes four years ago for the Healthy Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010, which requires more fruit, vegetables and whole grains in school meals, along with less sodium, sugar and fat. It was a major achievement, the first update to school lunch rules in decades designed to make school meals more nutritious.

The School Nutrition Association, an industrybacked group that represents school cafeteria workers and originally supported the standards, has now turned against them. The association said it fully supports getting kids to eat healthier but said many districts are losing money because students aren't buving the healthier lunches.

More than 1 million fewer students eat lunch at school each day since the first round of standards went into effect in 2012, following decades of steadily increasing participation, said Diane Pratt-Heavner, a spokeswoman for the association. A second round of rules, including standards for school breakfasts, took effect July 1.

"How can we call these standards a success when they are driving students away from the program?" she said.

Her group wants more flexibility for districts that are losing money. A House bill to fund the Agriculture Department in 2015 would give districts a chance to apply to skip the requirements for one year.

Rep. Robert Aderholt, of Alabama, the Republican author of that measure, said the lunch rules go too far and came too fast for school districts to handle.

"As well-intended as the people in Washington believe themselves to be, the reality is that from a practical standpoint these regulations are just plain not working out in some individual school districts," he said after a House panel approved the bill. A vote by the full House is expected after its July Fourth break.

4 confirmed dead in Florida boat collision

Associated Press

MIAMI — Four people are confirmed dead and at least a dozen injured in a Florida boat collision, authorities said Saturday.

The boaters are believed to have been out celebrating the Fourth of July when the crash happened late Friday, near the Dinner Key Marina in Miami.

Rescuers were alerted by one of the boaters at about 10:45 p.m. He said he'd been hit by another vessel and that his 36-foot vessel was taking on water, the Coast Guard reported.

Multiple law enforcement agencies responded to a chaotic scene. Officers plucked several people out said they contacted the of the water while struggling to determine how many were still missing.

"We kept getting report after report of more people in the water," Miami Fire Rescue Lt. Ignatius Carroll said.

Eight people were initially transported to Miami hospitals. adults, a male and a female, later died.

Commercial salvage crews located a second vessel believed to have been involved in the crash. Two unconscious women were found on board and transported to a nearby boat ramp. Coast Guard officials second boat's owner. They were told the owner's son had taken the vessel out Friday evening.

The search for the missing boater and any other possible passengers continued into Saturday.

Relatives of a female victim found her body in the water on Saturday, Jorge Pino, a public information officer with the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission said.

Investigators located the body of another person later Saturday morning, Carroll said.

Names and ages of the deceased and injured were not immediately released.

Stress could hurt brain development

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — A team of University of Wisconsin-Madison (UW) researchers has shown that chronic stress of poverty, neglect and physical abuse in early life may shrink the parts of a child's developing brain responsible for memory, learning and processing emotion.

While early-life stress already has been linked to depression, anxiety, heart disease, cancer and a lack of educational and employment success, researchers have long been seeking to understand what part of the brain is affected by stress to help guide interventions.

The UW research published in the journal Biological Psychiatry adds to a growing body of research linking chronic stress early in life to brain development.

The research focused on two brain regions — the hippocampus and amygdala — that are involved in memory, learning and processing emotion.

Findings from other researchers have been mixed, which the UW researchers believe may be attributed to automated software being used for brain measurements.

The automated software may be prone to error because the brain regions are so small, according to the UW researchers.

The brain is changeable and treatable through exercise, medication and cognitive therapy, according to Jamie Hanson, a postdoctoral researcher at Duke University's Laboratory for NeuroGenetics.

Shark bites swimmer near Southern California beach

Associated Press

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. — A 7-foot-long great white shark bit a man swimming off Southern California's Manhattan Beach on Saturday, officials said.

The man was bitten on the upper right side at about 9:30 a.m., suffering puncture wounds described as moderate injuries, said Rick Flores, a Los Angeles County Fire Department spokesman. The man was taken to a hospital conscious and breathing on his own, Flores said.

The attack started when a person fishing off the Manhattan Beach Pier hooked the shark and spent more than 30 minutes trying to reel it in, which, Flores said, made the shark grow agitated and take out more and more fishing line.

The victim was in a group of long-distance swimmers about 300 yards off the beach swimming past the pier, where Flores said the shark bit the man.

The fisherman cut the line, and a surfer put the injured swimmer on his board, taking the victim ashore with the help of Los Angeles County lifeguards. Paramedics began treating the man.

Autopsy: Palestinian teen burned to death

RAMALLAH, West An autopsy Bank showed an Arab teenager who Palestinians said was killed in a revenge attack was burned to death.

Palestinian militants fired two rockets Saturtoward a major southern city deeper into Israel than any other attack in the current round of violence.

The Israeli military said its "Iron Dome" defense system intercepted the rockets that were aimed at Beersheba. The military also said at least 10 other rockets were fired from the Gaza Strip and said it had retaliated with airstrikes.

Clashes between Israeli and Palestinian protesters spread Saturday from Jerusalem to Arab towns in northern Israel as hundreds of people took to the streets and threw rocks and fire bombs at officers who responded with tear gas and stun grenades.

Palestinian Attorney General Abdelghani al-Owaiwi said he received initial autopsy results from a Palestinian doctor who was present at the autopsy in Tel Aviv. He said it shows that 16-year-old Palestinian Mohammed Abu Khdeir, whose death has sparked large protests in his east Jerusalem neighborhood, suffered burns on "90 percent of his body."

His account provided the first details of the preliminary findings to Israeli teens who had be made public. The Israeli Health Ministry could not be reached for comment

The autopsy found evidence that Abu Khdeir had breathed in the flames as burns were found inside his body, in his lungs, bronchial tubes and his throat, al-Owaiwi said.

He also said the young man had suffered wounds on the right side of his head apparently from impact with a rock or another hard object.

Abu Khdeir's charred body was found in a forest Wednesday after he was seized near his home. Palestinians immediately accused Israeli extremists of killing him to avenge the deaths of three Israeli leaders have widely condemned the killing of the Palestinian youth, and Prime Minister Benjamin tanyahu vowed those responsible would brought to justice.

Honduras losing hope in search for trapped miners

Associated Press

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Honduran officials said Saturday they are losing hope that any of eight still-trapped workers survived the collapse of a small gold mine.

Three days after the cave-in, "there is a strong, bad odor of death within the mine ... and that worries us," said Moises Alvarado, chief of the country's emergency commission.

"Without oxygen, food or water, it is very difficult to survive for the 66 hours that those men have been in the mines," he said at a news conference. "We hope for a miracle. And only a miracle would let us rescue them alive."

Eleven workers were able to flee immediately after Wednesday's collapse, and three others were rescued on Friday.

The old, unregulated San Juan Arriba mine is in a mountainous municipality known as El Corpus, about 60 miles (100 kilometers) south of Tegucigalpa, the capital. Officials say more than 1,000 tunnels, most of them unmapped and buried, perforate the hillsides.

About 5,000 people work in artisanal mining in the area, many turning to the mines because plagues devastated the region's grain and coffee crops.

Ecuador's president may seek indefinite re-election

QUITO. Ecuador Franklin D. Roosevelt had it, so did Venezuela's Hugo Chavez and so does Nicaragua's Daniel Ortega. Could Ecuador's Rafael Correa be the next president to win the right to consecutive and indefinite re-election?

That's the question the country's constitutional court is debating, and the answer could radically change the future of the Andean nation of 16 million.

After years of vowing that he wouldn't seek office when his term ends in 2017, Correa recently announced that his Alianza Pais political party would push for a constitutional amendment that would open the gates for the charismatic socialist to keep his job permanently.

Stung by recent municipal elections where his party lost key cities, including the capital, Correa said the change is needed to preserve the advances of his "Citizens' Revolution."

"My sincere position was always against re-election," he told the country recently, "but after deep reflection, and knowing that sometimes our choices are between the lesser of two evils, I've decided to support this initiative.'

For his critics, permanent re-election is simply one more step in the country's slow march toward Venezuelan-style 21st century socialism with Correa

Four killed in car bomb attack in Somalian capital

Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Four people were killed when a car laden with explosives blew up near the parliamentary building in the Somali capital, Mogadishu, police said Saturday.

The Somali terror group al-Shabab claimed responsibility for the bombing. Capt. Mohammed Hussein said the car exploded at a checkpoint where it had been stopped by Somali troops. The dead were soldiers and refugees from an internal refugee camp near the check point. Hussien said.

He said Somali troops ordered the driver of the car out the vehicle for a search when he detonated the explosives.

Seven children from the camp were wounded in the attack. Al-Shabab did not say the target of the car bomber but al-Shabab has launched a campaign of attacks against Somali parliamentarians.

Somali legislators were holding a meeting at the parliament at the time of the attack.

Al-Qaida-linked Shabab said it was responsible for the killing of a Somali lawmaker and his bodyguard in a drive-by shooting earlier this week.

The targeting of members of parliament appears to be a new strategy for al-Shabab. The parliament is seen as an emerging pillar of democracy in the war-ravaged Horn of Africa nation.

Al-Shabab militants have previously carried out attacks against United Nations staff, government officials and African Union peacekeepers.

The terror group has launch attacks on neighbouring countries including Kenyan and Uganda which have sent troops to Somalia under the banner of the African Union, to bolster the country's weak U.N.backed government from al-Shabab's insurgency.

Furniture maker turns derecho debris into decor

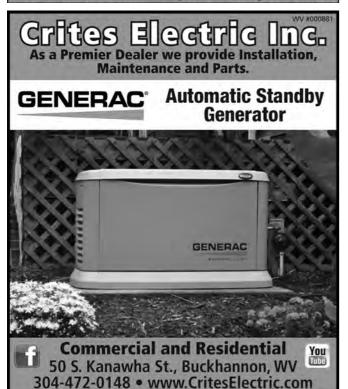

Joseph Elbert sits in a chair in his shop with furniture with wood salvaged from trees knocked down by the derecho that struck West Virginia in June 2012.

Charleston Daily Mail

LEON - Retired Washington Post photo editor Joseph Elbert didn't have to go looking for inspiration when he decided to start building furniture.

It nearly fell on him.

When a derecho swept across West Virginia on June 29, 2012, strong winds damaged buildings, uprooted trees and took down power lines across the state. Elbert's Mason County community did not escape the damage.

"There were just trees the sound of chainsaws going," Elbert said.

That gave him an idea. He decided to gather the downed hardwoods from his neighbors and get them milled into lumber.

His neighbors liked the idea, too, often using their tractors and bulldozers to drag the trees to Elbert's property.

He then found a portable sawmill that would process the trees for $200 per thousand board feet.

Elbert soon had 4,000 board feet of green sawn hardwood on his hands, but everywhere and you heard then realized he had no way to dry it. Professional lumber-yards use huge kilns to dry their lumber, and while airdrying is an option, it takes a really long time.

Elbert began researching his problem on the Internet and soon found plans for a solar-powered kiln designed by Virginia Tech in the 1970s for use in thirdworld countries.

The big, insulated box lets in sunlight from the top, heating the space to 140 degrees. As moisture leaves the wood, it rises to the top of the kiln where it escapes through vents.

Elbert said while oak would take a year to air-dry, his kiln cuts the process down to just a month.

Now, his shop is filled with piles of boards ready to be turned into lamps, chairs and tables.

It's not the kind of stuff you find at the local lumber yard. Elbert likes wood with knots, holes and other blemishes. He even cuts the boards to showcase these imperfections.

"It's part of its character." he said. "Most wood workers, it goes into the burn pile."

Elbert's work is a combination of rustic and modern.

He might use knotty, blemished wood, but his furniture is inspired by architecture and the mid-century design of the "Mad Men" era.

His chairs have high backs made up of long wooden slats, cut individually and glued together.

Volodymyr, head of Ukraine's Orthodox Church dies at 78

KIEV, Ukraine — The head of Ukraine's Orthodox Church died at 78 after leading it for more than two decades during the tumultuous post-Soviet period.

Volodymyr, who had been credited with stabilizing the church, died Saturday "after a long illness," the church said Saturday.

In his more than 20 years as head of the country's largest church, Volodymyr weathered the breakaway of two groups that declared themselves independent of the Moscow Patriarchate, which incorporates the Ukrainian church. Observers said he succeeded in preventing even more splits.

"He will go down in history as the savior of the Ukrainian Orthodoxy during a very difficult historical moment," said Andrei Zolotov, an expert on Orthodoxy said.

'Country Roads' led QB Trickett home to WVU

THE COMMENT DIDN'T appear to be made with a sigh or with any sort of an underlying tone of depressing realization.

WVU starting quarterback Clint Trickett instead said what he said matter-of-factly.

"I love this place and I love the people here, though sometimes they don't love me."

West Virginia is home for Trickett. He grew up here, considers many in this area to be some of his best friends and he played freshman football at Morgantown High before his family relocated to Tallahassee, Fla. Although his dad, Rick, still coaches at Florida State and Trickett started his career there, his connection to the Mountain State never faded.

During sleepless nights at FSU, Trickett admitted that plopping in the 2003 WVU football highlight tape was one of his best remedies.

"I would watch it and it would get me jazzed up for the next day,' Trickett said. "Every time 'Country Roads' comes on, I get chills.'

The bond runs so deep that West Virginia was on his mind when he got his driver's license.

"Don't tell my mom this, but I skipped out of school and drove up to West Virginia (from Tallahassee) that weekend," Trickett said. "I couldn't stay away."

So it is that Trickett understands how to take the good with the bad here. He knows what WVU football means to the state. He knows that the people here hate excuses — they just want accountability and results. He knows the work ethic, and he knows that every decision the WVU quarterback makes will be critiqued and often criticized.

People may appreciate his ties to Morgantown, smile when he talks about his favorite local fishing spots and love his dedication to hunting, but none of that makes overthrowing a receiver on a third down OK.

And Trickett, entering his second and final season with WVU, seems to be OK with that. He knows what he got himself into.

"You can say what you want about me as a player, but you're going to get a guy who plays his heart out and you're going to get a guy who is going to play hurt,' Trickett said.

If anything, that's what we learned last year. Trickett suffered two concussions and somehow played through eight games despite injuring his shoulder in his first extended action. Certain scenes from the Baylor game will never be forgotten. While WVU got creamed, 73-42, Trickett kept gunning it. He couldn't lift himself off the turf with his right hand, wouldn't pick up the sideline telephone with his right hand and didn't high-five teammates with his right hand. It was clear his shoulder was throbbing. Yet, he never took himself out. He threw the ball 28 times before WVU coaches did what they should have done long before that and sat him down.

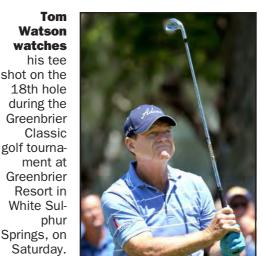

Does it bother Trickett that he only played one game at full health during WVU's 4-8 season? Absolutely. Does he admit to wondering, "What if?" from time to time? How could he not?

He stops himself though from going too far down that road.

A true West Virginian, Trickett promises only to leave his heart on the field.

"You can't call me soft," he said. "You can say I suck, but you can't call me soft."

SULPHUR WHITE SPRINGS — Billy Hurley III doesn't plan to lose much rest sitting on a third-round lead for the first time on the PGA Tour.

The former U.S. Navy officer shot a 3-under 67 on Saturday to extend his advantage to two strokes over Angel Cabrera entering the final round of the Greenbrier Classic.

"I've been working for a long time to win on the PGA Tour," Hurley said. "I figure if I shoot the lowest score tomorrow, I can't lose."

Hurley never relinquished the lead he has held since midway through the second round at Old White TPC. He birdied the par-5 12th and par-4 13th before dropping a stroke on the par-3 15th.

He had a 12-under 198 total. No third-round leader has won the Greenbrier Classic, now in its fifth year. Playoffs have decided the tournament twice.

The Clay-Battelle volleyball team compiled 19 wins before seeing its season end in sectionals.

This will be coach Josh Kisner's second season with the Cee-Bees. He said their offseason workouts are going well.

"Summer session is going great, we've had anywhere from nine to 14 kids come out," he said. "The girls are real enthusiastic, wanting to play, wanting to get better. They're donating their time in the summer to help improve that."

In their conference tournament last season, the Cee-Bees beat No. 5-ranked Madonna before losing to Paden City in the conference final to earn the Mason Dixon runner-up title.

"We knocked off the No. 5 team and that was a big victory," Kisner said. "A big confidence builder and since then we've built upon that."

Landing Mozes a recruiting coup for Gibson

BY ED OWENS

The Dominion Post

Dan Mozes was a fouryear starter for the Mountaineers football team, a three-time all-Big East firstteam selection and both a unanimous and consensus All-American during his senior season, in 2006.

That same year, Mozes the Rimington Award, given to the nation's top center, which still stands as WVU's lone individual award in the history of the program.

None of that may have happened if not for Tony Gibson. Gibson, the Mountaineers' defensive coordinator, was still on his first stint at WVU working under Rich Rodriguez when he took note of Mozes at Washington (Pa.) High School.

Mozes was a junior at the time, one year from Washington's undefeated season and Class AA state championship, and had drawn little interest from area recruiters.

"My perception of Dan's potential and some of the other schools' perception, including my alma mater, Penn State, were not congruent," said Guy Montecalvo, Mozes' head coach at Washington. "I knew the potential he had as a D-I player but, because he was only 6-foot-1 1/2, he didn't fit their typical profile."

Montecalvo, who now serves as the athletic director for Canon-McMillan High, in Canonsburg, Pa., couldn't gain any traction when it came to getting in-state schools to look at Mozes.

Penn State turned him down. So did Pitt.

Gibson jumped in and set to work on making Mozes a Mountaineer.

"Loyalty is a big thing, and Gibby and [Rodriguez] were the first ones to really come calling," Mozes said. "And the interaction with them was awesome. They were more than just coaches during that whole process: They were like father figures. That approach is so key for a good recruiter."

The approach was so key, in fact, that Mozes committed to WVU prior to his senior year. When other programs started inquiring about Mozes during that undefeated senior season, Mozes sent them packing.

"At first, I was recruited by West Virginia and Wake Forest — that's it," said Mozes, now the vice president of operations and head strength coach at Barwis Methods Training Center, in Plymouth, Mich. That facility's CEO is former WVU strength coach Mike Barwis. The center will be featured in a Discovery Channel TV series, beginning 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Dan Mozes sets up to block in WVU's 2006 win against Marshall, in Morgantown.

"And so when I committed to West Virginia after my junior year, Coach Montecalvo, who's a very loyal person, told me that a man makes a commitment and sticks with it. When other colleges came after me, he wouldn't let them talk to me. When mail came to me, I threw it by the wayside. Once I made my commitment to West Virginia, that was it."

It was a breakthrough moment for Gibson, who was in his first year at WVU. Looking back, Gibson realizes how Mozes' commitment helped put him on the map as a recruiter in Western Pennsylvania, an area he's continued to focus on for the past 14 years.

"For me, it all started with Dan," said Gibson, who returned to WVU in 2013. "The guy was the best center in college football and I knew it back then.

"We got him to commit the summer before his sehigh school team went 15-0 and won the state championship. We pressed him a bit and told him that he needed to jump on board."

While Mozes turned out to be a steal for Gibson, he was also the one that got away for a handful of other recruiters. One of those recruiters. Tom Bradlev, who now works alongside Gibson as WVU's senior associate head coach, was at Penn State at the time. He remembers Montecavlo's pleas to take a closer look at Mozes.

"When we turned [Mozes] down at Penn State, Montecalvo told me I was crazy. And I guess I blew that one," Bradley said with a laugh. "But evaluating talent is tough. Sometimes you're right on and some you misevaluate. You have to give [Gibson] credit: He did a better job evaluating Mozes, who turned out to be one heck of a player."

There's another reason Montecalvo specifically urged Bradley to sign Mozes: Not only was Montecalvo a Penn State alumnus, he shared the field with Bradley as a player. The two roomed together when Montecalvo was a graduate assistant for the Nittany Lions.

"Not only did I know [Bradley], but Bobby Junko up at Pitt was a lifelong nior year, right before his family friend and he was [assistant head coach] at the time," Montecalvo said. "I tried to sell them on Dan but they were skeptical. He didn't fit the mold. Those [Pennsylvania] guys had some egg on their face after Dan chose WVU."

While Bradley has hit his share of home runs on the recruiting trail, his old friend hasn't let him live down missing on Mozes.

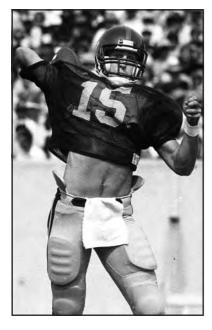

"You win some, you lose some," Bradley said. "Sometimes guys you love pan out and sometimes they don't. It's not a scientific process. But [Montecalvo] still gives it to me all the time that we didn't get Dan."

In the end, Mozes said, it worked out for the best. He left WVU as one of the most decorated players in the football program's history.

"People ask me what I'd change about my collegiate career," Mozes said. "But why would I change anything? I busted my [butt] and had a great time. We won the Sugar Bowl, I was an All-American, won the Rimington and I met my wife (Heather) there.

"I was told that the two most important choices you make in your life are where you commit to college and who you marry. Well, in my opinion, those are the two best choices I've ever made — and they both came in Morgantown."

sylvania during his subsequent stops at Michigan, Pitt and Arizona. Meanwhile, WVU's presence in the region took a hit after his departure.

Linebacker Nick Kwiatkoski (Bethel Park) is the only Western Pennsylvania player on WVU's roster who predates Gibson's return to Morgantown.

Since Gibson's return to WVU in January 2013, the Mountaineers have brought in Hodari Christian (Mc-Keesport), Cullen Christian (Pittsburgh; Pitt transfer), Ricky Rogers (Monroeville), Rushel Shell (Hopewell, Pa.; Pitt transfer) and a pair of Aliquippa High standouts Dravon Henry and Jaleel Fields. Henry (5-foot-11, 185 pounds) is a four-star cornerback and Fields (6-3, 286 pounds) is a three-star defensive end.

Breaking into Aliquippa and landing two top talents was a watershed moment for the WVU program.

"This is the first time I've ever gotten kids out of Aliquippa," Gibson said. "I've recruited a ton of them, but I'd never been able to get in.'

Aliquippa was a Pitt stronghold, sending future NFL players such as Mike Ditka, Tony Dorsett, Darrelle Revis, Jon Baldwin, Tommie Campbell and Sean Gilbert to the league via the Panthers.

That connection made Aliquippa a tough place for the Mountaineers to gain a foothold. According to Gibson, the last member of the Quips to come to Morgantown prior to Henry and Fields was Chuck Fisher, in 1995.

"Pitt built a fence around [Aliquippa] and set up their pipeline," Central Valley High (Monaca) football coach Mark Lyons said. "For West Virginia to pull not one, but two marquee guys from there is big time. Those are big pickups. That says a lot about the job [WVU] is doing."

WVU's efforts in the area haven't gone unrecognized. "Anytime you're able to go into someone's backyard like that, of course people are going to take notice," said Leonard, who is now on WVU's staff as a graduate assistant. "Kids are talking about it, people at the barber shop are talking about it, and you can bet every college coach that's been trying to get into Aliquippa is talking about it. "What 'Gibby' did (in signing Henry and Fields) was a real noticeable thing, but it shows what a hard worker he is. He's been trying to get kids out of Aliquippa for years and, with time and patience, it finally paid off.'

Gibson/Bradley duo

Gibson's recruiting ability already made WVU a threat in Western Pennsylvania, but the addition of senior associate head coach Tom Bradley, in February, gave the Mountaineers a 1-2 punch on the recruiting trail.

Bradley, a Johnstown, Pa., native, worked the Western Pennsylvania circuit for more than three decades at Penn State (1980-2011). He and Gibson bumped heads as rivals going toe-to-toe for the same

With both now working on the same side, WVU coaches hope their pull in Western Pennsylvania grows exponentially.

"It's really opened some doors,' Gibson said.

"Bradley has certain guys that he knows very well and I've got some guys that I know really well. And now instead of recruiting against each other, we're on the same team."

"We work well together," Bradley agreed. "We can compare notes and contacts so that we can divide things up depending on who is a better fit for that particular recruit. Between the two of us, we have a lot of experience in the area and we both work hard at it. And it's worked out well so far."

High school coaches have taken note.

Lyons, who coaches WVU target Jordan Whitehead at Central Valley, joked that adding Bradley almost gives the Mountaineers an unfair advantage in Western Pennsylvania.

"It's like adding another cleanup hitter to your lineup," Lyons said with a laugh. "But yes, it gives West Virginia an advantage, plain and simple. Tony and Tom are cut from the same cloth, they both understand Western Pennsylvania and they know what's important to kids and people in this region."

Guy Montecalvo, who was Mozes' high school coach at Washington and now serves as the athletic director for Canon-McMillan High, in Canonsburg, is familiar and impressed with Gibson and Bradley.

"You team up Gibson and Bradley, and West Virginia just may put a real stranglehold on recruiting in Western Pennsylvania,' Montecalvo said.

Changing times

WVU still has to clear the out-of-state stigma when recruiting, though the pressure to stay local might not be what it was when regional rivalries helped shape the recruiting landscape. But the Mountaineers' success in Western Pennsylvania (and those players' success in Morgantown) is a tool WVU's recruiters can use to their advantage.

"There's no doubt about it," Gibson said. "Anytime you can point to a guy like Major Harris, everyone knows him. If you look at that list (of WVU players from Western Pennsylvania), almost every single guy that came out of that area hasn't just played for us, they've been major contributors for us.

"And the guys we have now, they're going to be major contributors before their careers are over. Some sooner than others, but they all will. And we feel like we're getting good quality kids, too. We're not going up there to sign just anybody: These guys are going to have major roles here."

Logan, a Pittsburgh product, wanted to play for the Panthers but wasn't offered a scholarship to Pitt. While injuries limited Logan's career in Morgantown, he was good enough to go in the second round of the 1997 NFL draft and was recently selected to the WVU Sports Hall of Fame.

"I was born and bred to be a Pittsburgh guy," he said, "and I grew up idolizing players like Dan Marino and Tony Dorsett. I wanted to go to the University of Pittsburgh. I wanted to be a Pitt Panther. But when they didn't offer me a full scholarship, I said, 'OK, I'm going to go to their biggest rival and just kill them for four years.' And what better school than West Virginia, with the Backyard Brawl, to go and play against those guys?"

WVU went against Pitt during Logan's collegiate career, with Logan recording a career-best nine tackles in the Backyard Brawl as a junior.

That didn't make things any easier at home, where the WVU-Pitt border battle was in full swing.

"It caused some grief on game days," Logan said of his allegiance to WVU. "My whole family is die-hard Pittsburgh sports fans, but when, I went to West Virginia my dad said, 'That's my son and I'm going to cheer for his team.' You can imagine the family feuds that almost started.'

Future focus

Coaches admit Western Pennsylvania isn't producing the quantity of Division I talents it once did. New hotbeds, such as South Florida, have been more reliable for WVU recruiting in recent years.

WVU hasn't played Pitt since 2011 — and no future meetings have been established — but the Mountaineers remain committed to finding talent just north of the border.

"There's no question about it. That whole region is still very important to us," Bradley said.

"Anytime you go into a school with that 'WV' on your shirt, they know who you are and they know about your school," Gibson said. "They have a connection to it. Dravon Henry was a national recruit, he had more than 40 offers, but we got in there early and built that relationship with him and his family.

"He and [Fields] got along great with our staff and understood what we were trying to do. Not that anybody else didn't do it the right way, but I just think that we outworked people when it came to recruiting Dravon and Jaleel. They trusted what we were selling."

Trust may be the biggest factor of all. That's what Bradley and Gibson know they must earn as the Mountaineers continue to expand their reach in Western Pennsylvania. "That's the Big 2 right there," Leonard said of Gibson and Bradley. "It's a huge bonus as far as recruiting goes. Bradley is a guru and Gibby just goes out and gets it done. Put those guys together and I think you'll see a lot of the top talent in that area coming to West Virginia in the next couple of years."

CEE-BEES

One standout member of the Cee-Bees' team is Hannah Carreon, who will be a junior this coming year.

"I'm looking forward to beating Madonna again and making it to regionals," she said.

In sectional play last year, the Cee-Bees beat St. Mary's, advancing them to the finals where they dropped another match against Paden City.

Kisner said their biggest area rival is Trinity, which they lost to last season a few times.

"Trinity is always a county rival, they're always good," he said.

"They've lost a little bit from last year, but they've beaten us three times and that's something we'd like to get back."

The season opener features Morgantown, University and Trinity in a county showcase, which Kisner said is a good match for people to come watch.

Along with their threeweek summer session, the team has been playing in the adult volleyball league at the Board of Park and Recreation Commissioners. They use the time to scrimmage their coach, parents and other adults who play in the league.

Kisner said their work this summer has his hopes high for next season. "Last year, we had a fantastic season with 19 victories, and everyone is returning from that team," he said.

"Some personal goals for the team: Obviously we want to do better with everyone returning. I'm hoping for at least a 20win season and to see how far we can go in the tournament.'

After such a successful season, Clay-Battelle may have an advantage as they did not lose any starters and have one senior returning to the squad this

"We're still a young team; we're only turning one senior back from last season," Kisner said. "We will be junior-loaded this year, but we have a lot of experience because of the sophomores last year that will be juniors this year."

The race was supposed to start at 7:57 p.m. Saturday, but showers soaked the 2 1/2 mile su-season and the second to be postponed a day. The Daytona 500 at Daytona was delayed more than six hours. Bristol also was affected, and Texas was delayed a day.

2nd Wimbledon title for Kvitova

Associated Press

LONDON — Petra Kvitova plays so much better at the All England Club than anywhere else, and now she owns two championships to prove it.

In one of the most dominant performances in a women's final at Wimbledon, the sixth-seeded Kvitova of the Czech Republic overpowoverwhelmed Eugenie 13th-seeded Bouchard, of Canada, 6-3, 6-0 in only 55 minutes Saturday to add to her 2011 title at the grass-court Grand Slam.

"I know," Kvitova said, "this is the best tournament for me."

Absolutely true. Her career record of 26-5 at Wimbledon translates to an .839 winning percentage, compared to her marks of .667 at the three other majors and .681 at all other events.

In 2014, Kvitova lost in the first round at the hardcourt Australian Open, and in the third round at the clay-court French Open. But get her on the grass court, and those speedy serves and flat forehands really shine.

"For sure, she was on," Bouchard said. "We know that when she's on, she's very tough to beat. Especially on this surface."

The Dominion Post's

Petra Kvitova, of Czech Republic, holds up the trophy after winning the women's singles final at the All England Lawn Tennis Championships at Wimbledon, London, on Saturday.

Saturday, 24-year-old Kvitova certainly was "on." Oh, was she ever. Pretty much perfect in every way.

The left-hander hit that reached serves 113 mph and earned easy points. Walloped big, deep returns that left Bouchard little time to react. Smacked flat groundstrokes off both wings that zipped right where she intended, often skidding near lines, helping accumulate a 28-8 edge in winners. Won 11 of 14 points she played at the net.

Most surprisingly, even to Kvitova herself, was the way she motored around the Centre Court grass with her right thigh heavily bandaged, displaying defensive skill that she's not necessarily known for. It was telling that Bouchard lost in such a lopsided manner despite four unforced errors.

"I mean, (a) few shots was really incredible, and I really couldn't believe that I made it, actually," said Kvitova, who was within two points of defeat against Venus Williams in the third round. "I said, 'Oh, my God, this is good!'

The match was played under a heavy cover of clouds, and it seemed as if Bouchard's best chance to regroup would be a rain delay.

don't know," Bouchard's mother, Julie Leclair, said, "if there was much she could've done."

A shower arrived minutes after the brief-ascould-be final concluded. Before the trophy presentation, the retractable roof was closed, and both players left the court for a bit.

Argentina's Ezequiel Lavezzi and teammates celebrate at the end of the World Cup quarterfinal soccer match between Argentina and Belgium, at the Estadio Nacional in Brasilia, Brazil, on Saturday. Argentina won 1-0.

Defense stands up, Argentina into semis

Associated Press

BRASILIA, Brazil — This time for Argentina, it was less about Lionel Messi and more about the men behind him.

Argentina made the semifinals of the World Cup for the first time in 24 years on Saturday as stubborn defending and clever tactics overcame Belgium in a tight 1-0 victory.

Before the quarterfinals, Messi's magic had bailed out the team as it labored unimpressively through the group stage and past Switzerland in the second round, relying on four goals its playmaking superstar. But coach Aleiandro

Sabella's strategy appeared to work at Brasilia's Estadio Nacional as Argentina scored early and then outmaneuvered a Belgium team that was left completely frustrated.

Belgium coach Marc Wilmots criticized Argentina as "an ordinary team" that relied on a couple of attacking players and mostly defense, built on the back four and combative midfielders Lucas Biglia and Javier Mascherano.

It was good enough to beat Belgium, though, and might be the key to Argentina overcoming more impressive teams in the last and a couple of assists from four of the World Cup as the South Americans go in search of a third title, but first since 1986.

Netherlands 0 Costa Rica 0 (4-3 shootout)

SALVADOR, Brazil -Late substitute Tim Krul made two saves in a 4-3 penalty shootout victory over Costa Rica to give the Netherlands a spot in the World Cup semifinals following a 0-0 draw.

Krul, who came on in the 120th minute, stopped shots from Bryan Ruiz and Michael Umana in the shootout.

Volquez helps Pirates beat Phillies

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Edinson Volquez allowed one run in seven sharp innings and Andrew McCutchen hit a two-run homer in the first to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 3-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies on Saturday.

Volquez (7-6) had an RBI groundout with the bases loaded in the second inning as the Pirates moved a season-high five games over .500 at 46-41. The Pirates could've added to the 3-0 lead, but Gregory Polanco and Starling Marte each flied out with men on second and third.

McCutchen followed up Friday's game, when he was a home run shy of the cycle, with the big hit off David Buchanan. Cutchen connected after Polanco, with a single.

Philadelphia dropped a season-high 13 games below .500 at 37-50.

Buchanan (4-5) found his stride after the second and kept the Pirates at bay until he was lifted in the sixth. Philadelphia's starter was charged with three runs and six hits and a walk.

Brewers 1, Reds 0

CINCINNATI — Matt Garza threw a two-hitter for his fourth career shutout, and Milwaukee ended its four-game losing streak by beating Cincinnati.

Despite a slump that matched their longest of the season, the Brewers maintained the best record in the league and a comfortable lead in the NL Central.

Aramis Ramirez singled home a run in the first inning off Homer Bailey (8-5), who gave up seven hits through eight innings. Two Brewers were thrown out at the plate.

Marlins 6, Cardinals 5

ST. LOUIS — Pinch-hitter Jeff Baker's RBI hit with two outs in the ninth inning helped Miami rally to beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-5 on Saturday.

Casey McGehee fouled off five full-count pitches from Cardinals closer Trevor Rosenthal (0-4) before getting the tying hit, with Donovan Solano running from first and just beating a relay to the plate that catcher Yadier Molina couldn't quite handle.

Mariners 3, White Sox 2

CHICAGO Miller hit an RBI double in the 14th inning, and Seattle beat Chicago for their fifth win in the last six games.

Michael Saunders reached on an infield single against Ronald Belisario (3-5) and swiped second before Miller hit a drive into the gap in left-center for a ground-rule double. It was Miller's first hit in six atbats on the day.

pitched two scoreless innings for the win and Fernando Rodney got three outs for his 25th save in 27 chances.

Logan Morrison and Michael Saunders had three hits apiece for Seattle, which has won 11 of 14 overall. Felix Hernandez pitched eight sharp innings to help the Mariners bounce back from Friday night's 7-1 loss in the series opener.

Twins 2, Yankees 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Yankees catcher Francisco Cervelli made a throwing error in the 11th inning that allowed Josh Willingham to score from second base, giving the Minnesota Twins a 2-1 victory over New York on Saturday.

With the bases loaded. Trevor Plouffe hit a dribbler to reliever Matt Thornton (1-1). The left-hander flipped it to Cervelli for the forceout at home.

Cervelli then tried for the double play but his throw sailed way over the head of first baseman Mark Teixeira, and Willingham raced home with the winning run.

The win snapped a seven-game home losing streak for the Twins against the Yankees and was just Minnesota's fourth win against New York in 17 games at Target Field.

Brian Duensing (2-2) pitched around a Carlos Beltran single in the 11th.

The benefit of the Navy is you learn how to sleep anywhere. I think I'll sleep fine tonight, too."

Cabrera wore an Argentine blue shirt in the third round and is riding his country's momentum in the World Cup, including Saturday's 1-0 win over Belgium to advance to the semifinal round.

"I was very happy when found out they won," Cabrera said, adding that he was equally as giddy when he started his round with four birdies on the first six holes.

Old White sets up nicely for Cabrera's long drives and he made four birdie putts of 19 feet or

"I was able to get the speed of the greens, and that was the big difference," Cabrera said. At the Wells Fargo

Championship in May, Cabrera was the secondround leader but closed with a pair of 75s. Another under-par round today would mark the first time that he has had four rounds in the 60s since the 2010 Deutsche Bank Championship.

Chappell barely got anything going until making a 12-foot putt for birdie on the par-5 17th.

Wildlife habitat, timber management go hand-in-hand

BEGINNING TODAY, the Mountain State Outdoors page will be on hiatus until hunting season in the fall. Columns by Dave Milne and Dr. Dave Samuel will continue to run weekly.

RECENTLY, it seems like every week you can watch the news and see a wildfire burning out of control somewhere in this country. Granted, these fires can do a lot of damage, but a lot of good can come out of them too.

I was near Yellowstone National Park several years ago when that huge fire roared through the park. When I was back out there a couple of years later, it was amazing to see all of the grasses and small pines that had begun to grow. Actually, it's fire that causes the seeds to come out of the pinecones and begin to grow.

Controlled burning is a very common wildlife habitat management practice in the southern pine forests, but can also be used in the northern hardwoods. The Indians used fire to create better hunting and getting rid of undesired species so that they could farm. The colonists picked up on this practice and continued it.

Prescribed burns are also used to clear out dead and dry underbrush that causes these massive wildfires to spread so quickly. When there's less fuel, the fire can be contained much faster.

Using fire as a management technique is not something we should attempt on our own. You should obtain the services of a qualified individual to take care of it. This person will help you establish your goals and objectives and prepare a burning plan. Different objectives can require burning at different times.

Weather is the most important thing when it comes to having a successful burn. The three top things that the fire professional will look at are the wind direction and speed, the relative humidity and the temperature. If any one of these three things goes awry, your burn can be a failure.

A cool winter fire will not harm the large trees, but will kill the smaller ones along with vines and shrubs. In the spring, these plants will sprout back and provide tender browse and cover for the wildlife. The fire will also improve the germination of legumes and forbs.

Another positive aspect of using fire as a management tool is the cost. It's far cheaper to use fire than it is to purchase herbicides. The heavy use of many different herbicides to kill a wide variety of plants will significantly diminish the wildlife habitat. The use of chemicals can create other environmental risks and damage to the soil.

Actually, wildlife habitat management and timber management go handin-hand. When timber management is used to enhance wildlife habitat, a diversity of habitat types is created. If a stand of timber is left to mature with no cutting, this diversity is eventually lost. This results in the forest not being able to support various and abundant wildlife species.

As landowners, do we actually "own" the land? Yes, we may have title to it or the exclusive rights to use it, but the reality of the situation is that all we really have is the opportunity to make decisions on how it will be managed during the relatively short time that we have it. If all you want to see is a lot of huge trees with very little or no wildlife around, just let the forest grow because that's the way it will eventually end up. If you want to see a variety of wildlife, cut and burn from time to time.

After Cavendish falls, Kittel wins 1st Tour stage

TOUR DE FRANCE

RESULTS, PAGE 2-C.

HARROGATE, England Germany's Marcel Kittel won the first stage of the Tour de France for a second straight year after a late crash brought down British rival Mark Cavendish in the presence of royals on Saturday.

Kittel, who earned four Tour stages in 2013, won the 118-mile run in mainly bucolic Yorkshire countryside from Leeds to Harrogate. The German raised his arms skyward and cried after he edged Peter Sagan, of Slovakia, in second, and Ramunas Navardauskas, of Lithuania, in third.

"I am incredibly proud of this victory," Kittel, a Team Giant-Shimano rider who also won two Giro d'Italia stages in May, said through a translator. "It happened pretty easily. It was like coming out of a tunnel. I was able to accelerate like never before.

"It's really awesome. Deja vu, yeah."

The two top favorites for victory in the three-week race, Alberto Contador and Chris Froome, finished safely in the trailing pack that clocked the same time as Kittel: 4 hours, 44 minutes.

With fewer than 400 meters to go, and the speedrushing ahead, Cavendish veered slightly to his left and bumped Australia's Simon Gerrans. The two crashed alone, with Cavendish landing hard on his right shoulder.

Cavendish got up gingerly and cruised over the finish line — cradling his right arm. X-rays revealed he separated his right shoulder, the tour said in a statement.

His Omega Pharma QuickStep team spokesman Alessandro Tegner did not immediately about whether Cavendish would remain in the race.

According to Patrick comment Lefevere, Cavendish's team manager, Gerrans slowed down in front of him, and he couldn't get out of the way. "(Cavendish) was so sure that he would win that he probably made a mistake. He wanted to get out, he pushed, Gerrans pushed back, and they crashed," Lefevere said.

Many British fans were hoping for a win by Cavendish, a native of the Isle of Man, whose mother is from Harrogate. Prime Minister David Cameron, Princes William and Harry, and Kate, Duchess of Cambridge, were on hand among throngs of British fans who lined the route a testament to the cycling craze in the U.K.

England hosts the first three stages of this 101st Tour before riders enter France on Tuesday. In all, the 198 riders will cover 2,277 miles of road before the July 27 finish in Paris. Stage 2 on Sunday covers 201 kilometers from York to Sheffield, in southern Yorkshire.

Cavendish previously said that winning the first Tour stage was his main goal this year. He was hoping to capture his first yellow jersey and his 26th Tour stage win.

Do better by all children

Humanitarian crisis on our border cries for attention

The wish to give our children a better, safer life is not some liberal or conservative concept.

Nor is that desire just confined to America's shores and borders.

It's embodied in every family's hope for the future, from Azerbaijan to New Zealand.

Since the start of the federal fiscal year — Oct. 15, 2013 — this yearning has led families in Central America to risk the lives of at least 40,000 children as of June 15 in a perilous passage to the United States.

That compares to 2013's entire total of 20,000 unaccompanied Central American children taken into custody on U.S. soil.

Some suggest sending them back to their families immediately. However, U.S. immigration law prohibits turning away any children who are from noncontiguous countries.

For now, these children from Central America are held for awhile, then released to family members or foster families to await an immigration court hearing.

Some appear for these hearings and others don't.

The latest figures indicate the overall system is already choked with more than 300,000 such cases.

Though we're certain all too many people's first thought will be to politicize this issue, we will not.

This situation on our southern border is a humanitarian crisis, not a political one.

That's not to say that comprehensive immigration reform is not urgently needed.

However, under these circumstances, ensuring these children's health and safety is needed more. That means something more than a thick, glass-enclosed holding area in white-washed cinder block rooms. It also means ending the extreme overcrowding that is prevalent in these facilities. Sanitation must also be a priority in such crowded conditions. Clearly, Washington needs to act immediately.

Not only by appropriating more public funds to house and feed these children, but also to adjudicate their cases in a speedy fashion.

It's also incumbent on social networks, especially churches, nonprofits, child advocacy and civic groups, and others who care about children to step up now, too.

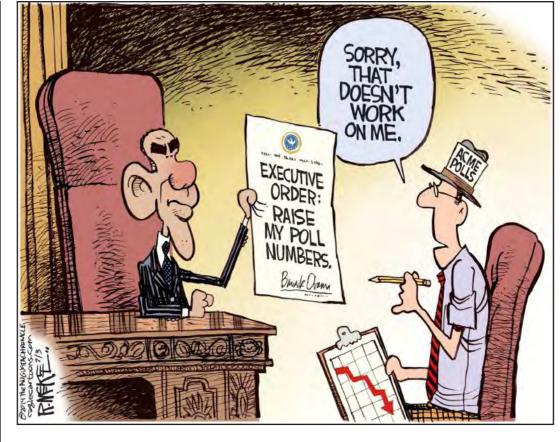

This may not be the welcome Latino parents were expecting for their children or the kind of welcome we would normally extend to any child.

But to think putting children in the hands of smugglers and sending them to an uncertain life here is better and safer than what these children come from puts this issue in perspective.

These are children — alone, scared, bewildered — and now wards of a system that's ill-equipped to adequately care for them, after all.

The best we can do is to do better by them.

Limit trucks' privilege for the public good

Morgantown has gotten big enough to need rules regulating heavy traffic.

This is actually an old idea — 2,000 years ago, Rome had the Lex Julia Muncipalis, limiting the daytime use of heavy wagons in order to relieve traffic congestion.

I understand the idea of a cost-benefit analysis, such as travel time-savings. However, all costs need to be considered, including the public good of safe, pleasant streets.

When people like me avoid coming downtown because large trucks make it difficult to drive, expose my young children to cancercausing diesel exhaust and make it unsafe to walk on sidewalks, money I would have otherwise spent at local businesses is lost to out-oftown corporations.

In this country, corporations may legally be "people," but driving on a public road is a privilege.

Please understand that I realize that everyone else has a right to make a living.

That said, without a union for the truck drivers, no one else is going to prevent companies from forcing drivers on a route physically unsafe for the truck, the driver (in case of accident) and pedestrians.

Interestingly enough, unionized companies like UPS set up distribution points, where smaller trucks deliver the dispersed load. This is why you do not see UPS delivering downtown with its 18-wheelers. They know the truck will not fit, and if it did, it would be rude to try.

In this country, corporations may legally be "people," but driving on a public road is a privilege.

Privilege can be limited, restricted or revoked altogether — and when a small proportion of the traffic makes life so unpleasant and even unsafe for the rest of us, I support limiting privileges.

I support the Safe Streets Morgantown movement, and I hope you do, too.

Inside the First Amendment Just 45 words protecting our core freedoms

C'MON PEOPLE - IT'S JUST 45 words!

We'll even give you the Twitter version: Freedom of Religion, Speech, Press, Assembly and Petition.

There, a whole lesson in what it means to be a citizen of the United States — and the answers to some the questions on the actual test that you have to pass to become a citizen.

Perhaps that's why 29 percent of respondents to the 2014 State of the First Amendment survey couldn't name one — they don't have to. Those of us living in the U.S. enjoy its protection of our core freedoms by virtue of living here.

And while it's valuable to know what the five freedoms are once again: Religion, speech, press, assembly and petition it's even more important to know how we can use them, and how to defend them if someone means to restrict or take away those basic rights.

Clearly, we care about the freedoms — for many years in the annual national survey of adults, conducted since 1997 by the Newseum Institute's First Amendment Center, respondents have said by a ratio of about 2 to 1 that the First Amendment does not go too far in the rights it guarantees. This year, 57 percent said the amendment has it right, while 38 percent disagreed.

Of course, those of us in the "First Amendment business" are worried about this year's 38 percent who said it does go too far. That means about one-third of our fellow citizens would rein in one of our basic freedoms - freedoms which we have preserved ssentially intact since 1791.

It appears that the news media and the concept of religious liberty are most at issue:

While just 33 percent of survey respondents said the news media try to report the news without bias, 80 percent said it's important for the news media to act as a watchdog on government, and a majority (54 percent) does not favor court orders forcing journalist to reveal their sources.

Some 61 percent of those responding said that religious-affiliated groups should be required to provide health care benefits to same-sex partners of employees, even if the group opposes same-sex marriages or partnerships, while 54 percent said businesses providing wedding services should be required to serve same-sex couples even if the business owner had religious objections to such marriages. But 66 percent also said that since the Supreme Court has held that corporations, like people, have certain free speech rights, corporations similarly should have certain religious rights.

This year's survey shows that the highest number of respondents could identify "speech" (68 percent) and "religion" (29 percent) as two of the five freedoms both highest in the history of the survey — but the numbers were the same as in 2013 for "press" (14 percent) and lower for assembly (7 percent) and petition (1 percent) than in 2013.

This year's survey demonstrates that more Americans are backing free expression in areas of our society that have not always enjoyed popular support, from students to same-sex couples. And while people may not see journalists today as unbiased, there's still great endorsement of the role of a free press, from being a "watchdog" to the use of confidential sources in performing that role.

Knowing our freedoms is a good thing. Supporting them, using them and protecting them and renewing our commitment to those efforts as we celebrate our nation's independence once again — are even better.

The American way of war: It just might surprise you

"We must resist our dreams of managing history." Reinhold Niebuhr. "The Irony of American History" (1952)

WHEN YOU STUDY how the U.S. goes to war, there is a prevalent though not perfect pattern. The triggering event is often a sudden crisis that galvanizes popular opinion and becomes the immediate occasion for military intervention but subsequently is exposed as a misguided perception or outright fabrication.

The Mexican War began when President Polk cited an attack on American troops in Texas — troops he had deliberately placed there to provoke Mexico. The Spanish American War began when President McKinley claimed that the battleship Maine had been blown up by Spanish saboteurs; subsequent investigations showed that the explosion originated inside the ship, probably due to an accidental fire in the munitions compartment. More recently, the Vietnam War moved into high gear when President

GUEST COMMENTARY

The meningitis outbreak we're not ready for

BY JOHN J. COHRSSEN AND HENRY I. MILLER

During the past two years, there have been a couple of outbreaks and sporadic cases of bacterial meningitis that federal health agencies failed to address with sufficient aggressiveness. It could have been much worse, and the experience should serve as a wake-up call.

Meningitis is a devastating infectious disease, often misdiagnosed as flu, and it can become debilitating so quickly that by the time it is recognized, the patient may be too sick for effective treatment.

During the last four decades, the threat from several types of bacterial meningitis has been significantly reduced by immunization. The first vaccine was approved in 1974, and a newer version was introduced in 2005. However, a vaccine for meningitis B, or MenB, has taken much longer to develop. The first MenB vaccine, brand name Bexsero, was not approved until 2013 by the European Union, Australia and Canada. It has not been approved in the United States.

MenB primarily infects those under the age of 25. College students and prisoners are particularly vulnerable because of their close quarters. About 10 percent of those infected die, and survivors can suffer brain damage, hearing loss and limb amputations. Those infected with less severe or no symptoms may become carriers.

Single fatalities from MenB occurred in New York in 2012, Michigan in 2013 and Pennsylvania this year. Since March 2013, there have been nine cases at Princeton University and four at UC Santa Barbara — none fatal, fortunately, but a Santa Barbara student needed to have both his feet amputated.

In order to make the unapproved vaccine available to the MenB primarily infects those under the age of 25.

Princeton and UCSB students, the Centers for Dis-Control ease and Prevention had to resort to a cumbersome process: Filing voluminous Investigational New Drug applications, or INDs, with the Food and Drug Administration for permission to acquire and distribute the European version of the vaccine.

This process has inherent delays. The CDC had to prepare and file the INDs, establish treatment protocols, involve an institutional review board and the manufacturer, get the necessary patient or parental consents, and ensure that the vaccine would be covered for any potential liability under the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program.

Two drug companies, Pfizer and Novartis, submitted marketing applications for their vaccines in June. It will be interesting to see how quickly the FDA will complete its review and get one or both of these on the market. (Typical review times are six to 12 months.)

Had the East and West Coast MenB outbreaks been more extensive, hundreds or even thousands of people could have died or been maimed. We need policy changes to address such threats more efficiently. For example, the delayed access to Bexsero would have been avoided if the FDA had had "reciprocal" authority to rapidly approve a drug or vaccine approved abroad in the face of a public health threat in the United States. Such reciprocity would derive from the prior approval by a major foreign regulatory authority, such as Canada or the EU.

There will be other health crises. It's time for Congress to enact legislation that makes the process simple and efficient with a short turnaround time and with a trigger sensitive enough to spur action even if only a limited number of cases of a serious disease arise.

Up to now, we have been lucky. But recalling Louis Pasteur's admonition that "luck favors only the prepared mind," we need to prepare.

Synchronizing signals answer to traffic issues Too many traffic signals are not what cause Morgantown's traffic gridlock. Lack of traffic light synchronization is.

Big cities, such as Baltimore, have been using traffic synchronization techniques since the 1960s. Driving at or near the speed limit results in green lights along nearly any stretch of roadway when lights are properly timed and controlled. In this day of computer controls and cameras, this feat is now easier than ever before. It is a mystery to me how a college town with engineering students and professors could have such unacceptable traffic Is anyone up to the task of what should be an easy problem to improve upon?

Isaack made a point of finding best in everyone

Concerning the passing of Morgantown artist, Peggy Isaack:

If, as Ralph Waldo Emerson once said, "The purpose of life is to be useful, to be honorable, to be compassionate, to have it make some difference that you have lived and lived well," then surely Peggy Isaack lived a purposeful life.

Peggy Isaack instilled in many a love of the arts, taking special time to notice all that nature has to offer and that many of us in our busy lives neglect to see and experience.

She took the same time and care to encourage many students to be the best they could be over the course of her career as an artist and teacher. She always made a point of finding the best in others.

Her legacy will live on in the many lives she touched and in the beautiful art she leaves behind.

The university has an indoor pool, but it costs $75 for the summer for people who don't work for or go to school at WVU, and then you can only use the pool for one hour per visit.

I would love to be able to use an indoor pool. I like to swim, and that would be great in the winter. I am sure I am not the only one who would like Morgantown to build an indoor pool, and I am sure it would generate some money for the city.

The local government encourages people to exercise. Well, give me a place to exercise besides me walking on my treadmill every other day for two miles at a time.

When my wife has to go on business trips — and I join her — I spend a lot of the time at the gym and the pool at the hotel, when she is in her meetings.

But there are not enough such trips for me. If the city would build an indoor pool, maybe it would also serve to keep some of the kids from getting into trouble.

But if we are to have an indoor pool, the people who would use it would need to treat it as their own and take care of it, so it would be there for everybody to use. If someone would start to damage the pool, just stop and think for a minute about their tax dollars that would be paying to build the pool for their use. It's just an idea for BOPARC rication, a cowed Congress went along and the bulk of the American media endorsed the deception. Dissent became unfashionable.

When the facts became clear and the justification for our military intervention evaporated, a new rationale needed to be invented. We were, it turned out, committed to the creation of a democratic government in the middle of the Middle East.

As recent events in Iraq have clearly demonstrated, this democratic dream was always an illusion. And all those political and journalistic pundits who got it dead wrong the first time around, and who now blame President Obama for failing to maintain a residual U.S. military presence in Iraq, need to be called on their credibility. For they fundamentally underestimated the tribal, ethnic and religious loyalties that dominate the Middle East and that make any Jeffersonian version of a secular state in Iraq impossible for the foreseeable future.

Prime Minister Nouri Maliki is never going to create an inclusive, pluralistic government, not just because he is stubborn but because the Iraqi people do not want one. In truth, there is no such thing as the Iraqi people. All those Shiite Muslim militia members gathering are not volunteering to preserve a united Iraq but rather to protect their religious shrines.

What we are witnessing now is the partitioning of Iraq into three regional sovereignties Shiite, Sunni and Kurd which was always the inevitable consequence of our toppling of Hussein.

Commentators focus on what military or political actions the United States should take to control the damage. thereby exposing the same hubristic assumptions that led us into this morass. The sectarian forces raging in Iraq and much of the Middle East are beyond our control. And any permanent U.S. military presence will only further empower the Islamic extremists in the ensuing conflict.

Our big mistake was not failing to leave a residual force in Iraq in 2011 but invading the country in 2003. The gargantuan embassy we constructed in Baghdad is destined, sooner rather than later, to become a relic that symbolizes American folly. Start replaying those old tapes of helicopters landing on the roof of the U.S. Embassy in Saigon in 1975.

The recent decision to send 300 American troops back into Iraq reveals that even Obama does not get it. He apparently believes that the United States can overcome more than 1,000 years of history to transform the Middle East. We can't, and we never could.

Political emails unrelenting among influx of spam

PERHAPS, LIKE MINE, your inbox is being flooded with emails from Barack Obama, Joe Biden and Michelle Obama.

President Obama usually says or "Ann" or "So, Ann." Biden says "Here's the thing, Ann." And Mrs. Obama (Michelle) says "Hi" or "Hi, Ann.'

Obama wants to thank me in person by telling me to enter a contest to travel to Austin, where, presumably, he will be waiting to meet me although we live just a couple of miles apart in Washington. I'm not sure why he wants to thank me. He doesn't say.

But this is the amazing part. He only wants me to contribute $3 to be eligible for a free flight and hotel room in Texas and handshake.

Michelle is more practical. She wants me to give $10 to have a chance at this opportunity. Unlike regulated contests, however, my friends Barack, Michelle and Joe don't tell me what the chances are of winning.

Obviously, political columnists may not participate in such giveaways, let alone contribute to politicians. So if the goal of the emails is to make me give money to Democrats, that deluge is having no effect.

It's the same thing from Republicans, although they want me to give more — much more. Hundreds of dollars. Thousands of dollars. Hundreds of millions of dollars. (I am on these email lists by mistake because somehow Republicans are not taking advantage of the personal information out there for free which might indicate that anything in that range is highly implausible.)

Messages from the president, vice president and first lady warn that because Obama's name won't be on the ballot in November, many Democrats may not be motivated to vote or give money. In that case, they note with alarm, Republicans will have enormous amounts of money to fund their candidates and take over the Senate. Joe in particular is worried that the Koch brothers, those astoundingly rich guys (think $1 billion) in Kansas who loathe Obama and everything he stands for, will control the outcome of the autumn election by giving conservative candidates millions of dollars.

On the other hand, Bill and Hillary Clinton helped raise between $2 billion and $3 billion for politics and their causes in the past two decades, according to The Wall Street Journal. Republicans worry that if Hilary runs for president in 2016, she'll have a built-in money advantage. (The two Bush presidents raised $2.9 billion, so presumably if Jeb runs, they'd help.)

The 2012 presidential election cost $2 billion. It will cost much more in 2016.

This year, the Supreme Court weighed in again on the perennial issue of campaign finance, a subject guaranteed to make eyes glaze over but which is incredibly important. The rulings are changing our country, helping to make Washington gridlock permanent. The court has ruled that just about anything goes when it comes to raising money for candidates. Them what has can give. Special interest groups may raise millions and hide the names of the donors.

Seven times, the high court headed by Justice John Roberts has ruled by 5-4 votes to weaken laws designed to prevent the rich from controlling democracy. The court this year had an unusual number of unanimous decisions but not on campaign finance.

The latest decision struck down the cap on contributions a donor may give to federal candidates, causing a lot of people to worry that this opens the door to more corruption.

Oddly, fewer Americans are checking that little box on their tax returns that gives $3 of the taxes they owe (not an additional $3) to help fund the presidential election. If candidates take it, their fundraising is restricted. But candidates know they can rake in more dollars by refusing to take prorated money from the public fund.

So, fellow voters, expect more political emails in your inbox. How about $3 giving you a chance to meet the president in his home state of Hawaii or $5,000 to watch House Speaker John Boehner play golf in Cincinnati?

A rising stock-market tide helped lift these five mutual funds to the biggest returns in the second

They had the highest returns of the 1,239 U.S. large-cap stock funds that Morningstar tracks. The group represents a range of investing philosophies.

Leading the way was Touchstone's Premium Yield Equity fund. It looks for stocks with relatively high dividend yields that have a history of raising their payouts. It also screens for companies that have strong environmental records and stays away from producers of alcohol, tobacco or firearms.

The fund's biggest holdings all pay dividends, and dividend-paying stocks have led the market this year. Dividend-payers in the Standard & Poor's 500 index returned an average of 9.8 percent in the first six months. Non-payers returned 1 percentage point less, on average, according to S&P Dow Jones Indices.

Company Spotlight Pharmacy sales up in June

Walgreen and Rite Aid said Thursday that pharmacy revenue from their established stores climbed significantly last month. Pharmacy revenue rose more than 11 percent at Walgreen and 5 percent at Rite Aid.

Overall, Walgreen's revenue from established stores rose 7.5 percent in June, while Rite Aid's climbed about 4 percent. Slower growth from the retail area outside the pharmacy tempered the pharmacy gains.

The federal health care overhaul has expanded insurance coverage to millions of people. Analysts say the potential wave of new business from the newly insured has yet to reach drugstores, but that may change as those people start using their coverage.

of Maker Studios and DreamWorks' purchase of AwesomenessTV. industry watchers are wondering whether channel network Fullscreen might be next.

The network has 40,000 content creators, 425 million subscribers and generates 3,5 billion views each month. In June of last year, it scored a reported $30 million in investment from media companies The Chernin Group, Comcast and advertising agency group WPP. The deals valued the company at a reported $110 million.

Fullscreen founder and CEO George Strompolos recently spoke with The Associated Press.

What is your vision for Fullscreen? We started the company to empower the next generation of content creators. We're supporting about 40,000 creators around the world. That grows by hundreds per day. Directionally we like to say we're going to create the next Viacom, the next NBCUniversal, the next Disney. The goal was not to sell to those companies. The goal was to create one ourselves.

Do you need investment? No. We raised capital last year and

now we're a profitable business. When do you say, 'We are as big as Viacom? It's tough to know. It's never going to be an apples-to-apples comparison because we're talking about views in social video We may say, "We have a billion views." And they may say, "Well, what are they worth?" And in fact we have about 3.5 billion views per month. It's massive scale. So that'll continue to grow to 4 billion, 5 billion, 10 billion someday.

What will it take for advertisers to shift TV spending to online

The media business has changed. Creative is coming from all around the world now. Fullscreen is at the epicenter of that. There's a strong degree of interest from traditional media, including the big studios. They're taking note of where youth are spending their time. The dollars follow the eyeballs and they want to be part of that.

Someone told me that a media buyer can wake up at 8 a.m., plan out their TV media buy, be in the office by 9 a.m. and do something different. It's established, turnkey, you're buying spots and dots. When you come into the world of digital media, it's fragmented. There are different ad formats, platforms, creators.

The desire is there but you have that kind of tyranny of choice. As the format simplifies and the industry standardizes, that will get better and better.

From 7 a.m.-7 p.m. Tuesday, the IHOP restaurant at Pierpont Centre in Morgantown, along with other participating IHOP restaurants across the country, will celebrate 56 years of great food, service and "everything you love about breakfast" by offering guests a short stack of its world famous buttermilk pancakes for just 56 cents.

That's less than the original cost of 60 cents when the first IHOP restaurant opened its doors.

In 1958, Al and Jerry Lapin opened the very first International House of Pancakes, complete with iconic blue roof, in Toluca Lake, Calif. Fifty-six years later, there are 1,627 IHOP restaurants in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and several other countries.

Area exporters commended

Submitted to The Dominion Post

Gov. Earl Ray Tomblin in June joined Cabinet Secretary Keith Burdette, the West Virginia Development Office and the West Virginia Export Council to present the Governor's Commendation for International Market Entry to representatives of 37 West Virginia business exporters, celebrating top small and medium businesses in the Mountain State.

Although West Virginia companies continue to export to traditional trade partners such as China and Canada, many of this year's honorees exported to emerging markets in Africa and the Middle East.

West Virginia's exports represent a diverse range of products including consumer goods such as barrel saunas and rope sandals; technology such as computer software; biomedical such as large scale DNA sequence production; automotive such as truck parts; and manufacturing such as fabricated steel products and industrial ceramics.

Monongalia County

- Gurkees, Morgantown. Product: Rope sandals. Countries: Kuwait, Spain, France, Italy.
- Protea Biosciences. Morgantown. Product: bioanalytics. Countries: Hong Kong, Turkey.

Marion County

- Backbone Security, Fairmont. Product: Computer software, hardware, training. Country: Greece, Lebanon.
- T&T Pump Co., Fairmont. Product: Pump manufacturing. Countries: Honduras, Peru, United Arab Emirates.

Writer misses new friends on the inside

For someone who sits around my apartment an awful lot, I have a very active social life.

Or, at least I did, until my in ability to do anything in moderation robbed me of my precious time spent with some of my best friends.

No, I'm not talking about last Wednesday's girls' night, when perhaps my cocktail intake was slightly higher than healthy, and my conversation a bit more, shall we say, lively than normal.

My neighbors may not have been altogether thrilled with hearing the ugly details, but my girlfriends, well, they're used to it by now. So I doubt this last bout of TMI will keep them away for too long.

Alas, the pals I'm really jonesing for are my new besties, the ladies of Litchfield Correctional Facility.

I actually only became acquainted with these women a couple of weeks ago, after a Saturday night sitting around a campfire with a few of my in-theflesh lady friends. During the course of the evening, "Orange Is the New Black" came up at least a couple times, as Lindsey and Lisa discussed some of the details of the show's second season.

"Stop!" I had to keep telling them. "I haven't started watching season one yet. No spoilers!" "Well, get on the stick," Lisa

And so, when I arrived home at 3 p.m. that Sunday, still smelling of camp smoke, I curled up on my couch with my iPhone and a pair of headphones and got down to it.

Thirteen episodes and 13 1/2 hours later, at 4:30 a.m., I finally put the phone down and forced myself to go to sleep, the season one finale still swirling in my head.

In an effort to prolong my enjoyment of season two, I tried to dole the episodes out in smaller spurts. Four per night, max, I promised myself, easing into the ever-deepening Katie-sized dent in the center of my sofa. Five on the third night, to polish it off.

And, of course, it was awesome. But since I finished it, I'm so sad and lonely. My nights stretch out endlessly. Now what?, I think, scrolling listlessly through my Netflix recommendations. The hours between dinner and sleep seem empty without these inmates I've come to love so much.

In an effort to stave off the withdrawal symptoms, I've taken to Googling the show, reading whatever critiques, reviews, criticisms or predictions for season three I can find.

I honor them by fixing whole meals of institution-type foods: (Vegetarian) chicken nuggets with microwave mashed potatoes, boxes of bright-orange-powder mac 'n' "cheese," (vegetarian) hot dogs and tater tots with a fruit cup.

OK, OK. So the dinners are just because I'm lazy, uncreative, and too hot and tired to cook. But I'm thinking about them while I'm eating this awful stuff, so it kind of counts.

I invite Lisa and Lindsey and Danielle and Angie over, in the hopes that we can put off talking about our lives until I've had the chance to analyze just what Lorna and Piper and Nichols and Poussey are up to. I buy beer and put clean ashtrays out on the porch to entice them.

And I wait. And wait. And wait, for season three.

Why, it almost feels like a prison sentence. So here I am begging, Netflix throughout the summer, said Susan Oleott, district wildlife diversity biologist for the West Virginia Division of Natural Resources (DNR).

"Most insects are not dangerous, but the ones that are aggressive are the ones around their nests and are only life-threatening to those people who have an allergy to them," Oleott said.

However, although most bugs and insects may not be too dangerous, Oleott said it doesn't mean any bug or insect should be taken lightly, especially wasps.

Web of confusion: The real story about W.Va.'s spiders

BY AMANDA DEPROSPERO The Dominion Post

They may look scary, but for the most part, spiders are harmless, said Vicki Kondo, a research assistant in entomology at WVU. Even, she said, the ones that have a venomous bite.

In West Virginia, there is only one type of poisonous spider: The black widow.

While it's often believed that the brown recluse can be found here, Kondo and Jim Amrine, emeritus professor of entomology at WVU, said the only reasons you might find one are probably coincidental.

"I don't think we have reason to believe that they're here and breeding yet," Kondo said. In fact, many people may mistake another spider for the dreaded brown recluse. And while this little guy can bite and cause quite an uncomfortable bite mark, the yellow sac spider is harmless, for the most part.

Out in the woods, you might see larger arachnids, such as wolf and fishing spiders, that may look intimidating, Kondo said, but they're pretty harmless.

Characterized by its black coloring and highlighted by a red or orange hourglass shape on its belly, the black widow hides in rock and wood piles or old buildings, Kondo said.

Three types of ticks, three potential diseases.

Here in West Virginia, when traversing the hilly, grassy and wooded areas of the Mountain State, there are three main tick types to watch out for: Dog, deer and Lone Star ticks.

Each type has its own risks of disease if you're bitten, said Jim Amrine, emeritus professor of entomology at WVU.

Those main diseases are Lyme, Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever and Ehrlichiosis.

"All three of these diseases, the ticks, when they hatch, pick up the disease by biting mice," Amrine said.

If you do get bitten, Amrine said, don't panic. If you develop any symptoms of disease, see a doctor and tell them about the tick bite. Even if you do contract one of the diseases, Amrine said, they are all treatable with antibiotics.

And the incidence of all three diseases is fairly low, Amrine

Deer tick, Ixodes Scapularis

"This tick is widely distributed in the northeastern and upper midwestern United States," the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) and Prevention said. "It's been quite rare in this area," Amrine added, "but now we're starting to see more of them," in areas such as Pittsburgh and Chestnut Ridge Park. The deer tick can carry Lyme disease, so if you have been bitten, remove it carefully, put it in a vial or bottle, keep it dry and take it with you to a doctor.

"You don't want to take a chance with that pathogen, if it settles in," Amrine said.

build nests and make a paper structure with a twoplant material, which is not terribly aggressive, but they will sting you," she

Associate professor of entomology at WVU Yong-Lak Park said, although some wasps are good, some can be hazardous to people.

"There are many wasps in West Virginia and some are beneficial, but some of them are very dangerous what we call medically important insects, which mean they can hurt humans," Park said.

One type of wasp in particular you should try to avoid is the bald-faced hornet. Oleott said this type of hornet can be deadly to those who are allergic.

"Control bald-faced hornets as soon as possible. Both white and black ones are very aggressive and can build basketball-like size nest in trees," she said. "They're very dangerous and highly allergic (to people with bee allergies)."

On top of being aggressive, Park said wasps can sting more than once.

"They sting, they don't bite. By using a stinger, they put the poison inside of your body. If the poison is allergic to humans, it's very dangerous," he said. "Wasps are like needles one wasp can sting multiple times. It's more dangerous."

Jim Amrine, emeritus professor of entomology at WVU, warned people to stay away from the baldfaced hornet because they're intelligent and aggressive.

"Never throw a rock at a bald-face hornet nest," he said, because the hornet will be able to figure out where it came from and attack vou.

Not only do you have to be aware of insects flying around you, but you must be aware of where you walk, a big issue when it comes to yellow jackets.

"Yellow jackets make nests under the ground, so when you step on their nests, they're so aggressive, they come out," he said. "When they come out, they get inside your pants and they cannot get out, so they keep stinging."

Amrine said they're dangerous, too, because they're especially aggressive.

"They're predatory. They like to eat meat," he

They like to make nests near barns and garages, he said, and the time to do something about them is now because they'll become increasingly aggressive as summer goes on.

"If you catch them right now, the nests are small,' he said.

You'll want to spray insecticide or scatter Sevin dust in their nests in the evening so most of the vellow jackets are in there, Amrine said.

Another type of bee that causes a disturbance to people is the carpenter bee. Unlike other bees, carpenters won't sting, but Oleott said they will do damage to your house. However, there is an easy solution to help prevent this.

"Carpenter bees are not aggressive. They can damage your structure, so they're a good thing to try to control, but they won't sting you," she said. "You can make or buy traps to lure them in and trap them."

Oleott said that anyone allergic to any type of animal should always have an Epipen handy, as you never know when the need will arise. If you're not allergic, the bite or sting may not be deadly, but it may still hurt for a while.

"If you know you're allergic, you should have an Epipen," she said. "If you're not allergic, the bite will still swell up and be painful.'

Oleott said if you are bitten, look for a solution. "Surprisingly, putting mud or witch hazel on the bite will help it," she said.

Oleott said it's also dangerous for people to get rid of insect nests in a tree by burning it down.

"Don't burn the tree to get rid of the nest. It's 10 times worse for the tree than if you let it be," she

In addition to not destroying their nests, Park said how dangerous it can be to try to kill wasps in any way, especially because they're normally found at your house.

"Unfortunately, they like around your house, so you have to be very careful about removing them," he said. "Don't cut the branches while the wasps are active. It's very dangerous."

Preparation key to any outdoor outing

The Dominion Post

With the anticipation for many West Virginians to explore the great outdoors this summer, people first need to make sure they're prepared for any trip. Whether it's a day outing or a week-long camping trip, similar precautions need to be taken.

Knowing what you're getting yourself into and what the wilderness may require of you are keys to having a successful trip, said Brett Hagerty, program coordinator for outdoor recreation at the WVU Student Recreation Center.

"My suggestion for people is they prepare themselves — do a little bit of research on where you're going, find out details that you can," Hagerty said. "A guidebook can be a good starting point; they will have preparedness information — like what type of gear you want to take out."

A day hiking trip can be even more dangerous than a camping trip, Hagerty said. Most of the time, he said, the primary reason for injuries is that people just don't know what they're doing.

"If you're just going out on a day hike, it's not a bad idea to have an emergency kit," he said. "A lot of the times, that's where people get themselves into trouble because they're not preparing for it in the same way that you might prepare for an overnight trip.'

In addition to being aware of what you need to bring, Mike Peters, assistant district dean biologist for the West Virginia Division of Natural Resources (WVD-NR), said people need to be aware of wildlife throughout the woods.

"The biggest safety concern I have is with snakes that are out there right now — they're fully active," Peters said. "If you're going out, be aware of copperhead snakes and timber rattlesnakes."

Whether you're getting ready for a day trip or a weeklong camping adventure, preparation is key.

Both these types of snakes pose a threat because their bites are venomous, something Peters said will cause a lot of pain and may even cause longterm injuries.

"Late spring, when the temperatures become hot enough, they'll come out and stay until the end of summer," he said. Jim Amrine, emeritus professor of entomology at WVU, said keeping an eye out for rattlesnakes and copperheads is a good idea. Rattlesnakes aren't as common; you're more likely to run across a copperhead, he said. Also, be aware if you suddenly catch a whiff of a cucumber smell, because copperheads often give off that aroma, he said. While the fatality rate is very low if you're bitten, you should seek medical attention immediately, Amrine said. Lie very still and stay calm, he added, and do not put your bit foot or hand in ice because that keeps the venom in one place, which increases the likelihood of losing an appendage.

With these dangerous snakes outdoors, Hagerty said it is key to always have at least one other person with you at all times for safety reasons.

"If you get hurt, nobody is there to help you, so going with at least one, maybe two (people), is the safest route," he said. If you are doing any sort of hiking- or camping-related activity alone, Hagerty suggested to make sure you let at least one person know what your plan is, or else things could end tragically.

"Let somebody know where you're going and when you're coming back," he said. "If nobody knows where you are, then nobody is going to know where to come look for you."

And remember, Peters said, all wild animals can pose a threat.

"All animals are very active right now," he said. "However, I would say there is nothing to be too cautious about while outside."

As wild animals roam throughout the woods, Hagerty said a major problem is that people aren't aware of where they're hiking or camping — another reason it is important to do some preparation work before your trip to know what animals may be near you.

"(People) may not know where it is they're going. They may just go to some place and just start hiking and have no idea," he said. "So, do a little bit of preparation — a map for the area and research what's there."

One of the larger animals, bears, are out of hibernation now and wandering the woods looking for food, Peters said.

"Bears have emerged from their dens and are looking to put on body weight this time of the year," he said. "Mothers are actively trying to get body weight on their cubs, as well."

With the risk of dangerous situations, Hagerty recommended bringing only the essentials with you when camping. "In the summertime.

when the conditions aren't as severe, you could probably get by with not having as much. A lot of times, people bring too much, mainly clothing," he said. "The more weight you take with you, the harder it is.'

Bring synthetic clothing, he said, to save space and weight. "If you have the right kind of clothing and it dries fairly quickly, (and) if you go on a weeklong backpacking trip, you can get by with a couple of T-shirts and one pair of shorts," he said.

One last preparation tip, Hagerty said, is to remember that there isn't cell phone service everywhere.

"There are still a lot of places in West Virginia with no cell phone service and many of these places are the places you're going to be going and doing outdoor stuff," he said.

tick's marbling effect, the dog tick is known to carry Rickettsia rickettsii, which leads to Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

"Dogs and medium-sized mammals are the preferred hosts of adult D. variabilis, although it feeds readily on other large mammals, including humans," the CDC said.

Lone Star Tick, Amblyomma Americanum

Perhaps the most recognizable is the Lone Star Tick, thanks to the white dot on its back.

"That tick used to be not found at all in West Virginia, but now it's fairly common," Amrine said.

A Lone Star Tick bite can cause Ehrlichiosis in humans

"White-tailed deer are a major host of Lone Star ticks and appear to represent one natural reservoir for E. chaffeensis. A. americanum larvae and nymphs feed on birds and deer," the CDC said. "Both nymphal and adult ticks may be associated with the transmission of pathogens to humans."

Removing a tick

The best way to remove a tick is to pull it out with steady pressure, which will help to make sure the head of the tick does not stay in the skin.

Using your fingers or tweezers, Amrine said, pull gently but steadily over a period of one or two minutes.

"Don't twist or jerk the tick; this can cause the mouth-parts to break off and remain in the skin," the CDC said. "If this happens, remove the mouthparts with tweezers. If you are unable to remove the mouth easily with clean tweezers, leave it alone and let the skin heal."

The same process goes for removing a tick from a dog, Amrine said, and then, like a tick bite on a human, watch the dog for symptoms.

"If the dog appears to get ill, then take it to the vet and let them decide whether to treat it or not," Amrine said.

Prevention to prevent ticks, Amrine said.

There are several ways

DEET is a good option, he said, and he recommends putting it around your lower pants and socks areas.

"The higher the concentration of the DEET, the better," he said, although you should avoid putting it on children.

As a safety precaution, you can pull your socks over your pants for even more tick protection.

Although it's harder to find these days, Flowers of Sulfur is another product Amrine recommends for tick protection. Sprinkle some on your clothes, and the ticks will be put off by it, he said.

Finally, he also recommends Resmethrin, a spray you put on your clothing to repel insects.

While it may be impossible to avoid areas where ticks reside, especially if you're camping, knowing simple steps to avoid them with these powders and sprays is the key, he said.

"[Ticks] can be just about anyplace," Amrine said. "The most common is where you have a mixture of shrubs and high grasses. When you see that kind of country, just think tick country.

county in West Virginia,'

Amrine said. "It used to be common in outhouses under the seat." And while the black widow is timid most of the time, mess with her egg sac, and it could be another story. "It is very rare that it kills anybody, but people go through extreme agony because of the bite," Amrine said. One of the most common places to find a black widow. he said, is in a cemetery inside the reversible flower holders in a headstone. So, chances are, if you're out for a hike, you won't see a black widow.

"You're probably not going to encounter these unless you're gathering firewood or something," Kondo said.

Yellow sac spider

Commonly found inside houses, the yellow sac spider poses a small threat because of its bite, Kondo said.

It ranges in color from dirty tan to cream, and it creates a sac that it hides in, Kondo said, thus the name. Fully grown, it will be somewhere between 1/4 and 1/2 inch, including legs.

Amrine said it's not uncommon to find them in your shower, and he's taken a few out of his own bathroom, but he's never been bitten by one.

Though, "once in awhile, they get angry and they'll bite you on the foot."

While the bite is fairly run-of-the-mill, if you're allergic to it, the reaction may be more intense, Amrine said. For some people, it could take a few months for the bite to finally heal, Kondo said.

Brown recluse

While the brown recluse is not thought to be common in West Virginia, the occasional one is found here because of people traveling into the state, or, Amrine said, if it was a pet.

The spider will get to be the size of a quarter, including legs, when fully grown, Kondo said. It is a "uniform tan or brown," has a flatter body, is violin shaped and has six eyes. If you think you've found a brown recluse, Kondo said she'd like to see it.

"I certainly invite people to send me specimens," she

With climate changes, she said it wouldn't be unusual if they started to move north into the southern parts of West Virginia.

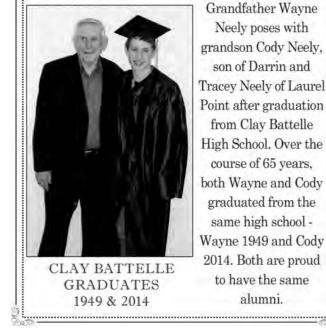

If I have a bite ...

If you're bitten by a black widow, or what you believe could be a brown recluse, stay calm and get to a hospital, Kondo said.

"Clean off the area, apply some ice," she said. "If you know it's a black widow, go see a physician as soon as possible."

And if you feel nauseated, have malaise or a tightness in the chest, get help immediately.

But it's important to stay calm because a raised heart rate will cause the venom to flow through the bloodstream faster, she said.

EELY ALUMN

Summer brings variety of new shows to small screen

WHILE SUMMER IS STILL undoubtedly about vacations, pools and everything outdoors, in the past few years, another activity has taken hold, carrying over from the cold months: New TV series.

Now it's not uncommon to see summer-themed commercials alongside promotions for new dramas and comedies.

While I used to watch "Covert Affairs" each summer, sprinkled with some re-runs here and there, now, there's so much to choose from in the TV arena. So this year, I decided to watch some of these new additions and let you know whether they are worth skipping that pool time for some air-conditioned vegging out in front of your big screen.

Here are some of the season's new offerings:

■ "Mystery Girls" — "90210" alums Tori Spelling and Jennie Garth reunite in this troubling new comedy. I say "troubling" because it seems woefully devoid of any humor or heart. Particularly distracting is Spelling's Lisa Frankish wardrobe, which might just be the brightest thing about this show featuring two former stars coming together to create a detective agency. (8:30 p.m. Wednesdays on ABC Family).

■ "Tyrant" — Rich in stereotypes, which could actually prove to be the point behind this series, "Tyrant" promises a lot of action and intrigue as a SoCal pediatrician, Barry, returns to his home, a Middle Eastern country where his father rules with an iron fist. Barry is wary of returning to his family, even if it is just for a simple wedding, but he is right to be suspicious, as he is once again thrown into turmoil. The show is right on the edge of my comfort zone, violencewise — I'm a big baby when it comes to gore but I liked the pilot so much, I'll likely continue to watch with my hand over my face, peeking through my fingers. (10 p.m. Tuesdays on FX).

■ "Girl Meets World" — While I was never a huge fan of "Boy Meets boat just slightly — the pilot of this spin-off did the original no favors. Corey and Topanga are adults now, living in New York City, and the story follows their daughter's introduction to "the world." The pilot was cheesy and unbelievable. And frankly, it didn't make much sense. (8:30 p.m. Fridays on Disney starting July 11).

■ "The Leftovers" -Perhaps the most anticipated of all the shows this summer, this HBO addition gave me some leftover thoughts of my own: Namely, what the heck just happened? Two percent of the world's population up and disap peared mysteriously three years prior, and now the people that were left behind are struggling to come to terms with their lives. To be fair, I've only watched the first episode, but I was left with so many questions that I'm not sure will ever be answered. But I guess that's life. Either way, I'll probably tune in again to see how it unfolds. (10 p.m. Sundays on HBO).

Harley-Davidson helps to put electric motorcycles in spotlight

Accordated Press

PRINCETOWN, N.Y. — When Maggie McNally-Bradshaw and husband Curt hop on their electric motorcycles and twist the throttles, they get a rush like no other.

Or maybe a WHOOSH!

"There is that sense of being at the beginning of something new, and part of our future as far as ecology," said McNally-Bradshaw, chairwoman of the American Motorcyclist Association. "People think it's novel. Then they realize it's powerful stuff. The technology is improving by leaps and bounds. It's coming."

While startups like Zero, Brammo and Mission are producing state-of-the-art electric motorcycles on the West Coast, Harley-Davidson has decided to jump into the fray. The Milwaukee-based manufacturer announced its LiveWire this month and plans to offer demo rides to gauge interest nationwide before going into production.

"We don't see it at all replacing internal combustion," Harley President Matt Levatich said. "I mean, maybe in 100 or 50 years, I don't know. We'll be open to what people want."

Still, while Harley's announcement may not sit well with its core riders, who relish the distinctive rumble of the V-twin engine's exhaust, it might provide the impetus needed for the electric market to take off.

"We had our biggest single day of Internet traffic in the history of the company the day Harley made its announcement," said Scot

Harden, vice president of global marketing for Zero Motorcycles, which began in a Santa Cruz, Calif., garage in 2006 and now is the top seller of full-size, high-powered electric bikes. "It just validates what we've been saying and how it's going to play out in the years ahead."

A recent study by Navigant Research suggests the industry is at the start of a trend. The research company anticipates sales of electric motorcycles worldwide will grow to 1.2 million this year.

No surprise that Yamaha, Honda and KTM also have electric bikes in the pipeline.

"It seems that electric motorcycles are going to be a pretty important mainstay," said Jerry Phibbs Jr., a longtime motorcycle dealer in Albany who sold all four of the Zero bikes on the showroom floor this year.

Cat's fascination with water could be dangerous

Q: My cat seems happy, but sometimes it's like she wants to commit suicide. Whenever I take a bath, she jumps into the tub. Then she screams as if she can't get out. We've tried to keep her out of the bathroom, but she's determined. Does she have a psychological problem? — N.P., Niagara Falls, N.Y.

A: Your cat is apparently smitten with running water. New York Citybased certified cat behavior consultant Beth Adelman suggests, "The running water stimulates the cat to jump, then she immediately realizes she's made a terrible mistake. Unfortunately, your cat isn't learning from previous experience, but her intent isn't to kill herself, I'm certain."

Perhaps, you can keep her out of the bathroom by having someone distract her with toys. Or, Adelman suggests, if you keep her out of the bathroom when the water is running, odds are when you do let her in she won't be as interested in taking a bathtub dive.

By the way, it's important to know how your cat feels about water and the tub. Never leave her in the bathroom without supervision when water is running in the tub. Indeed, once in the water, she may not be able to get out.

Q: My 6-month-old kitten will chew on just about anything. I'm careful to make sure she doesn't harm herself. Is there something cats can chew that's safe, similar to rawhide for dogs? —

H.S., Baltimore, Md.
A: If your kitty begins to nibble through a live wire, the consequences could be deadly. For starters, consider buying electrical cord protectors, available at home improvement and many "big box" stores, or online. Remove as many plants in your home as possible, as gnawing foliage may cause an upset tummy or worse.

Ask your veterinarian about C.E.T. chews, specifically made for cats to chew on for dental benefits. Some cats like the large canine meatball-size dental chews from Royal Canin or Hill's Pet Nutrition. You might even go as far as stuffing the chews into a small dog Kong toy.

A small percentage of cats will chew on rawhide for dogs. Moisten the rawhide just a bit, then warm it slightly in the microwave.

FROM HIKING ADVENTURES to beach vacations to family barbecues, summer is a great time to be outdoors. But summer is also a time when many Americans get injured. Here are some summer safety tips from Owen Lander, MD, medical director of the Emergency Department at WVU Healthcare.

■ Wear protective gear. Whether you're hopping on a bike, motorcycle or all-terrain vehicle, using power equipment, or spending time on the water, always wear the appropriate gear to protect your body.

"Sprains, broken bones, lacerations, cuts — or worse — can be avoided if people take the time to put on a helmet, safety glasses,

■ Watch out for poison ivy. "Poison ivy and oak are common this time of year," explained Lander. "You can practice prevention by thoroughly cleansing the exposed area with soap and water immediately after contact; this may help."

Once the rash presents itself, there is no cure, only efforts to relieve symptoms. Oatmeal baths and cool compresses, as well as over-the-counter antiitch medications can help. If the rash is widespread and there are signs of infection, your doctor may prescribe an oral corticosteroid or oral antibiotic.

■ Bee-aware. Treatment for most stings consists of cool compresses to the area. You should also remove the stinger. Antihistamines, such as Benadryl, are helpful. Keep in mind that most anaphylactic-type reactions occur within the first three to four hours, specifically within the first 30 minutes. If an individual experiences massive hives, itching, shortness of breath or difficulty breathing, the patient needs to be transported to the emergency department immediately. Lander says that anyone can have a severe allergic reaction, so seek immediate care for any significant symptoms. If you have an Epi-Pen prescription, obtain enough to always have one with you at home, in the car and during travel.

■ Love the skin you're in. Despite the plethora of sunscreens available, severe sunburns and the side effects, including nausea, fatigue, blisters and infection, are still a fairly common occurrence in the emergency department.

According to Lander. "Consult a doctor if a severe you're not sweating sunburn covers a large portion of your body with blisters, or is accompanied by high fever or sedehydration and the vere pain." Some remedies for less > severe sunburns include keeping the burns cool and moist, avoiding repeat exposure, and taking an over-thecounter pain medication. Lander suggests leaving blisters intact.

> ■ Stay hydrated. Even if you don't think you are losing water because you're not sweating buckets, the outside temperature and sun, as well as your activity level, contribute to dehydration and the risk of heat stroke. While grabbing a cold beverage seems like a tasty way to keep hydrated. Lander maintains that water and sport drinks are always your best option. "Keep in mind that soda and caffeinated drinks, as well as alcohol, are diuretics, which means they encourage the body to lose more water than it retains.

■ Fire safety isn't just for third graders. "We often treat patients who have burned or injured themselves while manning the grill, or lighting or cooking on a campfire," said Lander. "We're not suggesting that people refrain from these activities, but we are encouraging them to be smart. Stay alert and within your faculties, use proper equipment and follow instructions.

Do things differently to solve a problem

Q: My stepdaughter has been in and out of trouble for 13 years. Of the 18 years I've known her, she's deceived everyone she comes in contact with. She gave up all three of her children to their father 13 years ago.

She's bounced from one man to another and is now on her second marriage to a man who's been in trouble half his life. She'll turn 45 this December and is now in jail for the second time (that we know of). When she wasn't happy in New York, she fled with someone to Virginia.

She seems to need us only when she's low on money. Now she thinks we should send her $300 monthly because nobody else will, while she is in iail. (Shortly after her arrest, her husband was also arrested.) She's even asked us to send her the money we usually give her for her birthday and Christmas now, claiming she'll never bother us again. My husband isn't happy about all of this, but he usually gives in and sends money.

I have two daughters, both in their 30s, who have everything going for them and are never in trouble.

What advice would you have for us? - L., via cyberspace

A: I'm sure vou realize that your real question is not about whether or not to send your stepdaughter more money. Her problems are more psychological and spiritual than financial. Something has blocked and twisted her life into an orgy of self-destruction. One obvious culprit would be drugs. The obvious first step which you could make a condition of sending her money — is for your stepdaughter to get a full psychiatric and medical work up and seek treatment at a good rehabilitation center.

Sending her money with no conditions makes you and your husband enablers, not parents, even if your intentions are born of love. But changing the direction of her life when she's been off-track for so long won't be easy. Ultimately, your stepdaughter must choose the life she wants to live, and the choices she makes are. for the most part, beyond your control. If some day she expresses a desire to enter a rehab center near you, go pick her up that day!

I want to move outward and inward from your very personal family problem to what it might teach all of us about the choices we make. To do this, I'd like to introduce all of my readers to the best question I've ever heard in my life – one we must all ask, whether our lives are going great or we've hit some bumps in the road:

How long do you want to live like this?

That's it.

This question doesn't ask you to figure out why you're doing things that don't work out. It just points you to a different path. We always think we must understand why we mess up before we can change, but the truth is just the opposite. We can start doing things differently, then live our way into the answers of why we went

All you and your stepdaughter have to do is say in a powerful and sincere voice: "No. I don't want to live this way one more minute!"

The question is also good because it works for happy people, too. If you want to live the way you're living forever, then do it! Continue to make the same choices about work, friends and family that you're making now.

Everything is about choosing, and the Biblical wisdom from Deuteronomy 30:19 is powerful and clear: "I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live."

Waiting is not choosing. Handwringing is not choosing. Choosing is turning around and walking in a different direction, which by the way is the exact meaning of the Hebrew word for repentance (teshuva). I pray that both you and your stepdaughter will choose a new way of life. I pray for all of us to choose, turn and live.

Treatment for peanut allergy exposes kids to them

BY CYNTHIA H. CRAFT

The Sacramento Bee (MCT)

Nine-year-old Michael Lee, a bright boy who's bound for fifth grade in the fall, lives with a serious, life-threatening medical condition. He suffers from a peanut allergy, a growing menace that can make breathing a matter of wishful thinking and anaphylactic shock a horrifying pos-

So why was Michael sitting at his family's kitchen table on a sunny and breezy morning last week, calmly and compliantly munching peanuts, one by one, with his mother standing by? He was eating peanuts in hopes they would control his allergy to peanuts.

Counterintuitive? Medically risky? You bet. Brave? Definitely.

Michael is the first child in Sacramento selected for enrollment in a novel, new treatment for nut-allergic kids. Developed by allergists at Mercy Medical Group, it's the first such program to be rolled out in the region. It's called food oral immunotherapy or, more to the point, peanut desensitization.

Peanut allergies are exploding in number in babies and children. In response, Mercy developed the program to introduce nuts to young patients in very small doses, gradually increasing the child's exposure to try to lessen the body's immune system reaction to peanuts.

Since Michael was 4, he has been rushed to the emergency room a number of times, said his mother, Geena Lee. First, for throat discomfort; then, head-totoe hives; and finally, anaphylactic shock.

Lee said the family had two choices: One, to wait and hope Michael never has lethal exposure to peanuts, a hold-your-breath option that breeds paranoia. Or they could weigh the risks and benefits of the new treatment and make an informed leap of faith.

"I don't see this as exposing him to something dangerous," Lee said. "I chose this treatment because the alternative is, what? To do nothing and be paranoid all the time?"

For instance, flu shots contain minute amounts of viruses to protect people from influenza, and allergy shots of pollen-based solutions ease the symptoms of seasonal outdoor allergy sufferers.

Here's the caveat: According to Mercy's allergists, the peanut desensitization program comes with "significant risk of a serious allergic reaction, including swelling, chospasm, difficulty breathing, loss of consciousness and shock, which may necessitate emergency treatment and hospitalization." And, the unmentionable: risk of death.

Still, the pair of allergists running the program, Drs. Rubina Inamdar and Binita Mandal, believe they've developed an air-tight protocol to prevent harm from coming to the dozen or so children they treat. Over 18 months, the two painstakingly reviewed research and protocols of a handful of similar programs across the country.

No one knows why food allergies — especially peanut allergies, considered the most dangerous - are growing at such a rapid pace. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported that, from 1997 to 2011, food allergies grew in number by 50 percent from 3.4 percent to 5.1 percent of American children.

Night Driving Problems?

At dusk and after dark our pupils naturally begin to enlarge. This allows more light into our eyes to help us see better. But larger pupils can also bring blurred vision to many people. For most of us, we get mild distortion with large pupils making road signs tougher to read as far away, while daytime is fine.

We now have "HD" lenses in both glasses and contact lenses specifically to reduce this night vision blur. Most patients also see better with "glare free" lenses. Talk with your eye doctor about these new lens options to make your night vision easier and safer!

feet line up. When looking at a person from the side, the ears are back over the shoulders, and the shoulders are back over the pelvis.

However, the posture and spine are abnormal if:

- The head is visibly tilted, shifted or rotated in one direction.
- The head juts out in front of the chest and shoulders.
- One hip is higher than the other, turned in one direction, or shifted to one side.
 - One shoulder is higher than the other or turned in one direction, or the whole upper body is shifted to one side.

Abnormal posture may cause damage to your central nervous system, leading to pain, or worse, a chronic disconnect from your brain to the tissues those nerves from your spine ultimately go to innervate. A chiropractor can make spinal adjustments to reorient the body and eliminate musculoskeletal problems and free pressure from nerves

This process is much faster for younger people, there is no doubt. They are much more pliable or plastic in nature and changes can still occur that are lifelong. Realize this kind of change happens well after most pain is gone and takes time. Many people don't get pain until they are older and therefore do not ever address the problem. Don't fret; changes can still occur if you are consistent with the tools and activities you are taught to do at home over many months and sometimes years. If the problem is too far gone, you may not be able to see postural changes that are significant enough to keep pain away. This is when you may need to have continuous maintenance of your spine through ongoing chiropractic and rehab services.

Wedding fashions from 1800s to today featured

DENTON. Texas — Wedding dresses from the 19th century to the present day are featured in a new exhibit showcasing the changing styles of American brides, from a 1900s dress with a lace choker collar to a beaded flapper dress from the 1920s to a 1980s satin confection with an explosion of organdy

More than 40 wedding gowns spanning from 1844 to last year are featured in the free exhibit that opened over the weekend in the North Texas city of Denton. Most of the dresses are from the University of North Texas' Texas Fashion Collection — which includes more than 20,000 historic clothing items, while others were loaned from private collections.

"It's going to bring up a lot of memories and sentiment," said exhibit organizer Myra Walker, director of the Texas Fashion Collection.

"American Brides: Inspiration and Ingenuity" runs through Oct. 24 at the Greater Denton Arts Council's Patterson-Appleton Center for the Visual Arts.

Walker said the exhibit not only shows the changing styles over the decades, but also highlights the elements that keep re-emerging. A Victor Costa-designed dress from 1993 for a wedding in Scotland with embroidered thistles features style elements from the late 1800s including a dust ruffle beneath the dress, covered buttons on the sleeves and a long train.

"It's got a 19th century flavor but it's really a 1990s dress," she said.

A gown from 1982 with billowing sleeves inspired by the dress Princess Diana wore the year earlier when married Prince she Charles stands beside a Gibson Girl-inspired gown from 1894 with similarly voluminous sleeves. Walker said American style began to come into its own beginning in the 1890s with illustrator Charles Dana Gibson's portrayal of American beauty.

"The show is not really about the white wedding dress, it's really about the essence of American style." said Walker, adding, "It is fashion history, social history, the birth of modern fashion and the birth of the American woman and the American woman becoming a fashion icon."

"It really is like a walk through fashion history," Walker said.

The exhibit also showcases dresses that stray the traditional from white, including an 1878 dress of deep plum silk satin featuring a boned bodice. "Everyone did not get married in a white wedding gown, often it was your best dress,' Walker said.

Walker's own wedding dress from 1974 is part of the exhibit — an example of the earthy style of that decade. A neighbor made Dresses from last year include a strapless Michael Faircloth gown with a bodice featuring leather and a dress designed by Nardos Iman with a skirt of ostrich feathers.

A gown from 1952 of white cotton organdy embroidered with floral motifs was what Janie Stidham chose to wear to her 1994 wedding. She found the dress, featured in the exhibit along with one she designed, in a Dallas vintage store window after realizing she was too tall to wear her mother's tealength wedding gown as she had planned and not finding exactly what she wanted in upscale stores around "It was perfect because we were in this old chapel and we rode from the chapel to the reception in a 1930s limousine," she said.

When Stidham, an associate professor at UNT who teaches fashion design, created the 2007 gown for an Alaska wedding, she took inspiration from the location, choosing a gray satin fabric and embellishing the neck and icy surroundings.

Steven Porterfield, who owns Cat's Meow vintage store in the West Texas city of Midland and loaned several gowns from his collection, noted that wedding dresses have a special place in women's wardrobes: "That's one thing women keep," he

An Old Idea Takes Root in Cities

Farming Food Forests

Imagine growing forests full of free food right in the middle of cities. Nutritious, tasty food would be available for the picking. Forest areas would help clean and cool the city air. Wildlife would find a safe habitat. Urban, or city, dwellers could enjoy the beauties of nature.

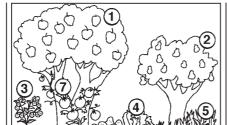

The Mini Page talked with experts on food forests to learn more about this growing idea.

What is a food forest?

A food forest imitates the ecosystem of a natural forest. The difference is that people choose each type of plant in a food forest. Each plant produces something that helps people or helps keep the forest going.

Women weed their rice fields in a food forest in Laos in Southeast Asia. In many tropical countries, people have been tending food forests for hundreds of years.

Layers of food

A forest ecosystem is built of layers of trees, shrubs and other plants. Experts say that in a food forest, these layers are:

- 1. The canopy (KAN-uh-pea), or the tops of branches and trees. Only the tallest trees, such as mature nut and fruit trees, create the canopy.
- 2. Shorter trees, such as younger nut and fruit trees, or fruit trees that don't grow as high.
 - 3. Shrubs such as berry bushes.
- 4. Vegetables and herbs.
- 5. Root vegetables such as carrots or Jerusalem artichokes.
- 6. A layer of edible growth closer to the ground, such as mushrooms or strawberries.
- 7. Vines such as grapes or beans that climb trees or other structures.

Many jobs

Food forest designers look for plants that do a variety of jobs. Besides providing food or medicine, the plants might attract helpful insects, return nutrients to the soil or supply mulch*. Filling every part of the forest with food-producing plants helps keep down weeds.

Food forests provide more than a variety of foods. Dave Jacke, a food forest researcher, says the ideal food forest would produce the seven F's:

- food
- fuel
- fiber, which can be used for clothing and building
- fodder, or food for animals
- farmaceuticals (really spelled pharmaceuticals), or medicines • fun

*Mulch is decaying plant matter that protects and enriches soil and plants.

Jordan Wolf

Lacrosse player Jordan Wolf belongs to a winning pack He and his teammates from Duke University captured Goodsport's back-to-back national titles when the Blue Devils knocked off Notre Dame 10-9 in the NCAA championship game on Memorial Day in Baltimore, Maryland. Wolf tallied two goals and four assists in the final game, and his six points (each goal or assist is a "point") led all scorers. The senior attackman had 103 total points for the season — setting new school and Atlantic Coast Conference records — and finished his career as Duke's second-all-time-leading scorer. Jordan also was named the NCAA Championships Most Outstanding Player, and was voted to his second NCAA All-Tournament Team. In addition to his many accomplishments on the lacrosse field, Jordan excelled in the classroom. A three time All-ACC Academic honoree, he graduated in May with a bachelor's degree in history.

Growing on Its Own

Returning on their own

A big difference between food forests and common crops is that plants in the forests are perennials (puh-RENee-uhls). This means the plants come back year after year. Today most of our food crops are annuals, or plants such as corn that must be replanted from seeds each year.

Most of our food now comes from only 20 varieties of annual plants. Food forests help increase food diversity, or kinds of food available.

Learning from nature

People design food forests to be self-sustaining. This means that once the forests get started, they will keep growing and producing on their own. The forests will basically take care of themselves.

People will need to do some work, such as cutting back branches.

The biggest amount of work comes at the beginning. People must find the land, clear it, enrich the soil, figure out what to grow and plant it.

Conservation Corps cleans out cattails and weeds from the site of the Beacon Food Forest in Seattle. Seattle volunteers built the Beacon Food Forest from the ground up. The area was covered with grass and wild plants. The dirt was hard and packed. Volunteers had to prepare the soil before they could plant.

The Washington

Seattle's food forest

The Beacon Food Forest in Seattle has set aside the largest area for a public food forest in the United States. Hundreds of volunteers have worked to plant two of its seven acres. It will have its first full growing season this year, five years after the project began in 2009.

As the years go by, the forest will become self-sustaining, and more food will be planted throughout all seven acres.

Fruitful Forests

Enough for everyone

Cities often plant food forests to serve the community. For example, "giving gardens" in the Seattle forest have been put aside to grow food for the needy.

In Johnson City, Tennessee, a church has donated land to form a food forest. The forest, which is being planted next to a food pantry, will offer free food to the community. Similar food forests are being planned all over Johnson City.

In Philadelphia, volunteers are planting orchards and food forests in low-income neighborhoods where fresh fruit is hard to get. They are planting food forests in vacant lots, schoolyards and other public lands.

In Boston, volunteers are planting a public orchard that includes rare apple ancestors, or heirloom (AIR-loom) apple varieties. They are planting fruit types that have almost disappeared. Part of their mission is to maintain diversity in our food supplies.

This heirloom apple, the Grimes Golden, is the parent of the Golden Delicious. It is being planted in Boston food

The Mini Page thanks Glenn Herlihy, co-founder, Beacon Food Forest in Seattle, and Dave Jacke, author of the adult-level book set "Edible Forest Gardens," for help with this issue.

Next week, The Mini Page is about the rodeo.

Backup plan

Local food forests give us a backup for our food supplies. This is especially important now that climate change is causing an increase of storms, drought, fires and other dangers that may harm crops.

Droughts and storms can hit close to home, too. It is important to have a mixture of food sources.

Food forests might survive problems better than field crops. Trees are hardier during droughts. They have much longer roots and have more energy stored to get them through a crisis. Trees will often survive disasters such as floods, whereas annual food crops would have to be completely replanted the next season.

Supplying many needs

Experts say that growing our own food helps us be more connected to our surroundings.

When food is transported over long distances, it can lose some of its nutritional value. It isn't picked at its top ripeness, so it doesn't taste as good as locally grown produce.

It takes a lot of energy to transport our food. Experts say the average plate of food in the United States travels 1,200 miles from the field to the table. It takes 10 calories of energy to grow and transport every one calorie we eat, experts say. This is not an efficient system.

Playing and working outside in nature help people relax, grow healthier and become happier. Public food forests encourage community spirit.

You can have the rewards of growing mini food forests in your own backyard or in containers on a patio or balcony. You don't need a big space.

Seattle volunteers learn beekeeping. Bees are important in a sustainable food forest. They help plants reproduce

In Mon County, 69 homes sold during June

It's HARD to believe that July 4th, our mid-summer holiday, has come and gone. That also means we are more than half way through 2014. I am beginning to wonder where 2014 went. This is also the time when we reflect on what the real estate market has done at the half way mark. We now have enough data to see how we compare to previous years accurately, and it also starts to paint the picture of what the market is for 2014. Before recapping the year, we must review June.

June was another strong month for single family detached home sales in Monongalia County. There were 69 single family detached houses sold in Monongalia County between $75,000 and $474,000. This is the highest number of sales in a month to date this year. The average sales price was $236,403, while the median price hovered at $228,000. The average days on market decreased to 56 days. This is most likely to be a result of many new listings selling quickly and the older existing inventory being picked over. The average days on market in May was 92.

Now that we have reviewed the month of June, let's evaluate the market year to date single family detached home sales. There have been 293 homes sold generating sales volume of $67,934,715. The price range of homes sold has been between $25,000 and $672,500. The average sales price is $231,859. The median sales price is $220,000. The average list-to-sale ratio is 96.5 percent of the list price. The average days on market for properties sold, is 96 days.

These numbers are slightly behind 2013, which was an excellent year. Total sales volume is down 14.5 percent, the total number of homes sold to date is down 9.5 percent, the average sales price has dropped 5.5 percent, but the median sales price has held stable and the average days on market has dropped this year from 127 in 2013, to 96. The decrease in sales volume and number of homes sold can be attributed to the very slow start of the market during the first quarter as compared to 2013 when the market started strong.

Also, a big part of our housing market in Monongalia County is townhouses and condos. Year to date there has been 143 units sold totally $24,383,143.00 in sold volume. The price range of these units sold is $73,500-$315,000. The average sales price in 2014 has been $170,511, and the median sales price has been $167,000. The average days on market for sold units is 123 days. These numbers are similar to 2013. There has been exactly the same amount of units sold, but the average sales price is down 4.5 percent.

Keep an eye on gutters

Expert: Even with screens and guards, upkeep still needed

The Dominion Post

When was the last time you've cleaned your gutters? Well, this is a question that homeowners should know and stay up-to-date with, according to Jennifer Burgess, commercial sales specialist at Lowe's Home Improvement in Morgantown.

Burgess explained that many problems with gutters aren't major, but a simple solution to helping to keep your gutters clean can greatly help them in the long run.

"Gutter screens and gutter guards are great, especially if vou're in a leafy area — vou can put these on when you install the gutters or you can add this on later on," Burgess

By using gutter screens and guards, Ken Williams, millwork salesman at Lowe's, said maintenance will still have to be done to the gutters, but on a far lesser rate.

"You're going to have to maintain all types, but unless you puts a gutter guard at the top of the gutter to get all the leaves — that will keep you from having to go up and clean, but you're still going to have to get up every now and again to do maintenance," Williams said.

1448 SF • 3BR • 2.5 BA

The gutter guard, though not perfect, will protect the downspout, as well.

However, Williams said cleaning the downspout on a time-to-time basis is required to having the overall gutter system last a long time.

"Protecting the downspout from getting leaves in it is great by using the protective cover, but it's probably going to clog-up on you and you're still going to have to go up and clean." he said.

As for the types of gutters that are offered to homeowners in the area, Burgess said they offer two types of PVC guttering and two types of aluminum guttering.

"Normally, people will buy the aluminum. It expands and contracts a little better with the roof then the PVC and the vinyl ones do," she said. "The aluminum will stay closer to the house if it's a really hot day — you're not going to have as much issues with it."

Nonetheless, no matter the type of gutters used, Burgess said a small issue may result in any type of guttering that can turn into something far larger if not treated immedi-

"If someone has an issue where the gutter itself has started to pull away from the fascia board and they have water coming in from behind the guttering, this can lead to the possibility of water getting behind into the wood of the fascia board," she said.

Another key factor when purchasing gutters isn't just when the weather is hot, but just the opposite — when it's

In winter conditions. Burgess explained, the steps to making sure the gutters are consistently working efficiently — no matter what the conditions may be.

'In the wintertime, aluminum doesn't get as brittle as the PVC can, where you can have ice issues when putting up Christmas lights," she said. "During winter, you can use heat-tech products because they get attached to the guttering and also to the overhang of the roof, which melts the snow and ice on the edge of the roof, so then ice will not pull your gutter down."

If the proper maintenance steps are taken at all times by homeowners, then Burgess believes the only other problem that may arise deals with the downspout of the guttering system and installing the proper pieces to it.

"Only other thing to be aware of is when you are putting the downspout in and that the elbow of the system that goes from the guttering down to downspout is bent into either a three inch or the two inch dimension — that's normally the thing that throws people off," she said.

Williams put it simple when he said that the time for replacing gutters should not be too hard to tell — you'll just know.

"You can tell when a gutter needs to be replaced because it looks bad," he said. "If the gutters are sagging or look beat up — you're going to have to replace it.'

Use white, bright colors to mark guide while sawing

Most Jigsaws have a guide to help you stay on the cutting line. But if you have trouble seeing the hard-tosee guide because of vibration, sawdust or just poor lighting where you are working, use white paint or some other brightly colored mark, placed directly on the front end of the saw guide, to point the way. If your mark doesn't show up enough, place white tape over the front of the guide and make your mark on the tape. This will help you work faster and get cleaner cuts.

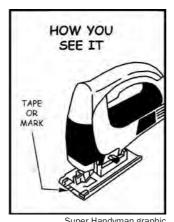

DEAR CARRELLS: I made a nice bookcase for my office that turned out great. I glued and nailed the joints to make sure they are good and tight. When I glued the joints, I added a little extra to the edges, since I know they absorb more glue than the sides. It's a good thing I did, because I could see it being absorbed on two of the four just as I was working. I added trim to the exposed edges so they look even nicer. — P.S.

A super hint

If you take the time to clean your deck, fence or siding, apply a water seal to the surface and keep it clean longer. These are available in clear or any number of colors, and will penetrate and protect the wood from Mother Nature.

ouper Handyman grapm

DEAR AL: I've had a good garden cart for many years. At the beginning of the summer, I decided to replace the old wheels since they were starting to wear down from the heavy use. They were solid-rubber tires, and I chose some "balloon" tires as replacements. These actually were tires for a furniture dolly, but they work great on the cart — much better than the original tires. I can't wait to give them a real test drive. — M.H.

Q: I want to replace my ceiling fan's blades but can't figure out how to get them off. There's very little room between the fan housing and the blade, and I don't have a screwdriver that will fit. Got any suggestions? — D.S.

A: Have you tried an offset screwdriver? It's curved to allow you to get into spots just like this, and should do the job for you. You don't have to use them often, but you'll be glad you have one in your toolbox again one of these days.

DEAR KELLY: I try to use simple cleaners in my home since my daughter has so many allergies. Baking soda is one of my very favorites, and, combined with lemon juice or vinegar, it works just as well as a commercial scouring powder. It works great on tubs, sinks and lots of other places. It's safer to use and much more economical, too. — S.R.

When it comes to pressure washers, there are some options. The K3 Follow Me is one that we like

It has an onboard tank for a variety of cleaners, and uses the Karcher Quick Connect System on all hoses. It includes two wands that can handle driveways, patios, fences, siding and even windows. Price of patriotic collectibles depends on the artist's fame, skill FLAGS, EAGLES, George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, the Statue of Liberty, Uncle Sam and other patriotic symbols are very popular with collectors. The image gives a simple message of patriotism to Americans.

You can find them in advertisements, as textile designs, on dinnerware or made into figurines for the fireplace mantel. Folk artists often made large wooden carvings to be displayed publicly.

But the price depends on the fame and skill of the artist, the age and size of the piece, and how it was used before it was sold to a collector. A large carved hanging wall eagle by John Bellamy (1836-1914) or an eagle made to display on a table made by the Wilhelm Schimmel (1817-'90) sells for thousands of dollars. An ordinary eagle by an unknown carver can be a bargain.

This 35-inch-high painted wooden eagle sold for $47, slightly less than estimated, at a Copake auction in upstate New York.

Q: My aunt left me a lamp. The base is a figurine of an 18th-century woman sitting at a piano gazing affectionately at a man with a lute. It sits on an oval brass base. Two curved arms extend from the back and they are decorated with a metal vine and tiny porcelain flowers. In the 1940s, my aunt was window shopping in Chicago with a friend, when she spotted and admired this lamp. Later, the bell boy in her hotel delivered it to her room. It was a gift! I'm interested in learning its maker and history. Value, too.

A: Your lamp is a typical example of porcelain made in the town of Dresden, Germany. Dresden porcelain is known for its naturalistic flowers and gilt trim, reticulation (cutout areas) and lace decorations. Figurines of 18th-century ladies and gentlemen, romantic couples, animal groups, cherubs and mythological subjects were popular. The most famous Dresden figurines are called "crinoline groups," which show court-life scenes like people dancing and playing instruments. More than 200 porcelain-decorating studios operated in Dresden in the late 1800s and early 1900s. They decorated white porcelain made in Germany, Austria and France. Most porcelain blanks were not marked with the manufacturer's mark. Your lamp probably was made in the 1930s and would sell for about $100. Replace the cord. Old cords are often cracked and are fire hazards.

Q: What marking should be on the bottom to identify something as Fenton glass? I have seen a few different markings on items on eBay.

A: Fenton was founded in 1905 in Martins Ferry, Ohio. The company is known for its carnival glass made between 1907 and 1920. Most Fenton glass is marked "Fenton," but some other marks also were used. Pieces marked with an "F" in an oval were made from molds bought from other glass companies. Pieces marked with the three letters "O," "V" and "G" are part of Fenton's Olde Virginia Glass line, made from 1960 to 1979. Fenton stopped making art glass in 2011. Copies of Fenton items currently are being made by an unrelated company, Fenton's Collectibles, using original Fenton molds. The copies are marked with both the Fenton mark and Fenton's Collectibles mark.

A peek inside the high-tech home of the future

BY PATRICK MAY

San Jose Mercury News (MCT)

SAN FRANCISCO — It was a poetic convergence of tech trends at the corner of Fourth and Howard streets.

Over in Moscone Center West, Google was getting its Internet-of-things groove on at its developers conference, touting plans to tie digital devices together with products like TV sets inside our homes.

Meanwhile, across the street in Moscone North, thousands of the people who will actually be building these tech-savvy abodes — developers, architects, manufacturers and contractors — were having their annual powwow, giving each other a peek of what awaits us all just inside our front doors of tomorrow.

All across the exhibitors floor at the annual builders trade show in late June, amid the nontechy stalwarts like roof tiles and toilets, you could almost hear the mantra humming just below the surface: "When it comes to the home of the future, all ... is ... one."

"We put the backbone wiring inside the new home so that everything we use in that home is more connected," said Joey Hill, a market representative with Legrand North America, a global rock star of switches and sockets. It's partnering with General Electric on cutting-edge home security and home entertainment technologies, the very stuff that the Googlers were crowing about nearby. "We provide the infrastructure that supports things like Netflix on your Apple TV," Hill said. "This is where the industry is going: You'll control your home lighting, security and audio, all from your smartphone or tablet."

While this trend has been picking up steam in the past year, Hill and others at the show painted a picture of an everrapid advancement in the digitally driven household. And borrowing a page from companies like Apple, where powerful computing is dressed up in sleek designs, Hill said, "It's not just cool gadgets around the house, but we'll be seeing much more of a focus on style."

And with that, Hill demonstrated a "pop-out outlet," a wall socket that's tucked into the wall and emerges — abracadabra! — with the push of a finger. "This technology has to be beautiful," he said, "if it's going inside your house."

Standing nearby, Shannon Stafford was nodding her head in agreement. "I've got that system installed in my own house," said the owner/president of Illuminations Lighting, an electrical equipment supplier in El Dorado Hills, Calif. "I can completely control my entire house with my phone."

Stafford sounded like a kid in a candy store, describing the magic-wand features coming soon to new homes across the country. "I can dim any of the lights down to 10 percent. I can customize every switch, outlet and night-light."

This was a candy store for the hometech crowd. On display a few booths over were new magical doorknobs that you can bump into with your rear end to open if your hands are full of groceries. Security is big, with sophisticated alarm systems and closed-circuit cameras that can turn a home into Fort Knox.

Grady Smith, district sales manager with Viking SupplyNet, showed off the latest in fire-suppression gadgets for the home, another big trend coming down the pike. That's especially true here in California, he said, where since 2011 all new one- and two-family homes and townhomes are required by law to have fire specially law.

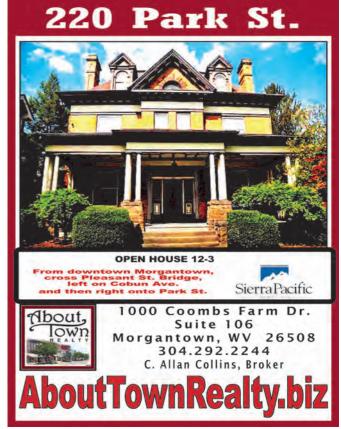

Front yard becomes living space

BY LISA BOONE

Los Angeles Times (MCT)

Garden designer Naomi Sanders was gratified to learn that a landscape design she created in Venice, Calif., was copied by a neighbor.

"I feel flattered," she said with a laugh. "It's great when homeowners see something or are inspired by a garden and apply it at home."

The imitation is understandable: Working with a limited variety of plants, Sanders transformed the front yard of a nondescript 1940s home into a striking, secluded space that feels fresh and modern.

The homeowners wanted an outdoor area they could enjoy without being isolated from their neighbors. But they never used the front yard because they felt exposed to the street.

Before diving into the makeover, Sanders examined the architecture of the house. "There was a weird disconnect between the 1940s architecture and the driveway, which are right next to each other," Sanders said. "I wanted to create a flow between the spaces as well as a connection between the driveway and the house."

Sanders painted the house green to help it recede from the street. This allowed the garden to stand out and feel larger than it was. Motivated by drought concerns, she also pulled up the lawn and installed a new driveway complemented by graphic pavers surrounded by gravel that works as a permeable hardscape.

Contrary to the homeowners' initial impulse to remove all the original foliage, Sanders chose to keep the home's older, established plants. A large palm tree was saved for its Commercial bee keepers who tend hives in California to help pollinate crops are on the front lines of the dying off of honey bees.

BY JOSEPHINE MARCOTTY

Star Tribune (Minneapolis) (MCT)

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY, Calif. — On a cool January day in the foothills of the Sierra Nevada mountains, Steve Ellis culled his sick bees. The only sounds were their steady buzz and the chuffing of the smoker he used to keep them calm as he opened the hives, one by one, to see how many had survived. The painful chore has become an annual ritual for Ellis, and, hardened now like a medic on the front lines, he crowned another box with a big rock to mark it.

"This one is G.A.D.," he said. "Good as dead."

Ellis, of Barrett, Minn., is one of some 1,300 commercial beekeepers from across the United States who mi-with nearly 2 million hives, for the single largest pollination event in the world. Below him in the sprawling valley nearly 1,400 square miles of almond trees — three-fourths of the global supply — were ready to burst out into a frothy sea of pink and white. To grow into a nut, every single blossom would need at least one American honevbee.

Ever since the ominous phrase "colony collapse disorder" first surfaced in 2006, scientists have struggled to explain the mysterious mass die-offs of honeybees. But here in America's food basket the escalating stakes are laid out as clearly as the almond trees that march in perfect rows up to the horizon.

Modern farm economics have created an enormously productive system of genetically engineered, chemically dependent agriculture. But it relies on iust one domesticated insect to deliver a third of the food on our plate.

And that insect is dying, a victim of the very food system that has come to depend on it.

A rush of recent research points to a complex triangle of causes: Pervasive pesticides, a flowerless rural landscape dominated by cash crops, and the spread of parasites and diseases. Together they inflict enormous damage on the honeybees that crisscross the country each spring and summer, like migrant laborers, to pollinate everything from almonds in California to apples in Maine.

In the past several decades, the number of crops that depend on bees for pollination has quadrupled, even as the number of hives available to pollinate them has dropped by half.

grate to California each year, along Every winter, beekeepers on average continue to lose a fourth to a third of their hives, raising fears that the gradual decline of these remarkably resilient insects will soon limit the production of foods that Americans now take for granted.

> Most consumers are insulated from the threat — as long as the aisles of America's grocery stores are resplendent with apples, lemons, coffee, cocoa, peanuts, grapes, onions, cucumbers and watermelons. But not Ellis and his sometimes partner Jeff Anderson, a third-generation beekeeper from Eagle Bend, Minn., whose family has made the annual trek to and from the California almond bloom since 1961.

> For them, catastrophe could be just one harvest away.

> This winter, Ellis lost about 1,200 of the 2,200 hives he had in the summer. Last winter, Anderson lost 65 percent of his 3,000 hives and didn't have enough bees to supply all his almond-growers.

> Ellis and Anderson are among the most outspoken of beekeepers nationally — in federal court, in the news media, before regulators, legislators and anyone else who will listen to their warning about the American food system's mortal reliance on pesticides and monoculture.

> Yet they see this unfurling crisis through entirely different prisms. Anderson, slightly round and solid as a fireplug, is a creationist who believes that God made the world and all its creatures in seven days, and that mankind was put here to take care of it. That includes using chemicals to grow food. "But we should be judicious in how we do it," he said.

Contentment is a better than wealth

DEAR DAVE: My husband has a great job, and I love my work and schedule as a substitute teacher. However, he wants me to take a full-time position so we can build more wealth. The only debt we have is our house. and we've already saved and invested a lot of money. What's your suggestion for this situation? - Marie

Dear Marie: First and foremost, you two have a responsibility to take care of each other and your own household. It sounds like you're doing that pretty well. So, if he wants you to take a full-time job only to build more wealth, I think that's a bad idea.

Wealth is for quality of life, and quality of life includes giving. It also includes a safe and stable future. But if you have to surrender the joy in life to do that — to build extra wealth or build at a different pace — well, to me that's just wrong. Contentment has nothing to do with how many hours you work or how many zeroes are in your bank account. Contentment has to do with your state of being. It's connected to your sense of gratitude, happiness and priorities. The idea that contentment is on the same spectrum as ambition? No, it's not.

I don't think you should take on a job or a schedule you hate

Contentment has nothing to do with how many hours you work or how many zeroes are in your bank account.

just to pay off your house a few years earlier. I wouldn't do that, and I don't recommend you do it either. People should do something with their lives they find enjoyable and they're called to do. Now, if your kids are going hungry and your bills aren't getting paid, then you do whatever it takes. But in this case, Marie, you're happy and you guys are in a great place. I'm sure your husband is a great guy, but I think he's wrong on this one.

DEAR DAVE: My credit union offers free accidental death and dismemberment insurance. Should I take it? — Alaina

Dear Alaina: That's fine if it's free. However, I wouldn't rely on it as an integral part of my overall financial plan.

In most cases, accidental death and dismemberment policies are just a gimmick. You're not double dead if you die by accident, and your spouse or family doesn't need the money if you die by accident rather than a heart attack. They need the same coverage and the same protection regardless. When it comes to life insurance, I recommend a good level term policy that's 10 to 12 times your annual income. That means if you make $50,000 a year, you need $500,000 to $600,000 in cov-

Still, if it's really free I've got no problem with the policy. Just make sure you're not paying some other big fee to join a club so you can get "free" stuff. When that happens, it's not really free after all.

Bruceton Mills store offers 'a little bit of everything' test your archery skills, then Pine Run Outdoors and Defense may be your ideal place. The multi-purpose store opened in November, after nearly 30 years of having the family-run business of Pine Run Service Center right next

According to Pat Graham, manager of Pine Run Outdoors and Defense, the main reason for expanding the family business, which was started by his father in 1984, was before there was not store like this in the area.

"[We] opened just because there's really nothing like this around the area and (we) thought it would be good for it," Graham said. "Slowly, each month it's getting a little bit better."

With this type of store being one of the few of its kind in the area, Shelia Haney, executive director of the Preston County Chambers of Commerce, said the more businesses and the array of different types of businesses the more people will

"It certainly is great to have diversity with businesses and great to have a range of different options for people in the area," Haney said.

The store, which is on Casteel Road in Bruceton Mills, offers a little bit of everything for outdoor ativities, as Graham explained.

"We have a little bit of everything — obviously firearms, ammunition, fishing equipment," he said. "Just your basic everyday hunting and shooting supplies."

Graham said the store carries a large selection of firearms, no matter what type you may be on the hunt for, but some stand out as the most popular firearms.

"We carry a lot of your higher end firearms — Six Hour Daniel Defense, Remington, Browning, Savage," he said. "We sell a lot of the Ruger, Smith and Wesson, Savage is a good seller for us, Mossberg — we sell a little bit of everything."

Switching types of firearms, Graham said that with the wide range of options offered at Pine Run, hand guns are quite popular, as well.

"In the hand guns, we carry the HKs, Smith and Wesson, FNH, Ruger," he said. "What we don't have, we order in for customers."

In a business that changes based on the needs of customers on a season to season basis and which hunting season it is, Graham said they're prepared for any season.

"It's basically based on your season with this kind of [business], it's all seasonal," he said. "Of course, in bow season, you sell a lot of archery equipment and rifle season; you sell a lot of ammunition and hunting rifles."

Gear and equipment for the great outdoors aren't the only items Pine Run carries.

According to Graham, the cility has a high-tech archery range that is fully virtual and for all ages.

"Other things we do offer are a TechnoHunt archery range here in the back, which is really popular with bow hunters — it's a lot of fun to shoot," he said.

In addition to the store products, Graham said Pine Run offers bow leagues that they run a few times a year, and a concealed carry course once a month, which it's done by Kelly Defense Solutions LLC.

Graham said he is confident the store will continue to grow in a multitude of ways, as he understands the entire process is about continually expanding all that is offered.

"We'll keep building each month or each week, really we keep increasing inventory," he said. "Word is still getting out. Obviously, it's going to take a little time for that."

Helping working parents is good business

THE TERM "work/life balance" has become ubiquitous, yet most American workers remain decidedly unbalanced.

That's not to say there aren't companies doing the right thing by offering employees flexibility, paid leave and other accommodations. Those are the smart businesses, the ones that put a premium on attracting and retaining talented people.

But those companies remain the exception and not the rule, an odd fact in a country where people of every faith and political stripe speak of "the family" as being sacrosanct.

During a recent White House Summit on Working Families, President Barack Obama said: "Family leave, child care, workplace flexibility, a decent wage - these are not frills; they are basic needs."

I couldn't agree more. Unfortunately, while the president talked a good game and said he would make sure federal agencies enforce existing rules that provide workers with work/life flexibility, he hasn't done much to help working parents. His Republican counterparts in Congress have done even less.

"Our sense is that small- to medium-size employers have a handle on this because they're competing in the same talent pool with bigger companies, and their ability to retain and attract people is based on flexibility, livable wages, equitable pay and mobility in the company," said Loren Harris, director of family economic security at the W.K. Kellogg Foundation. "Employers are looking at how they can attract and retain the best talent. They're seeing the writing on the wall and seeing that these issues are core to their mission."

But many larger corporations, knowing how gigantic the pool of available workers is, don't put much priority on accommodating employees.

"As with a lot of things in this country, there are sort of two Americas," said Tom Spiggle, a Virginia-based workplace attorney and author of the upcoming book, "You're Pregnant? You're Fired: Protecting Mothers, Fathers and Other Caregivers in the Workplace."

"If you look at the country overall, we're doing very poorly with family issues," Spiggle said, "especially compared to most other developed countries. "There are companies that are on the cutting edge and doing really good work with that, and then there's everybody else, your line workers in the fast-food industry and in the lower end of the income chain. There are just some horrendous stories."

Spiggle said that since 2008, there has been a "significant rise" in pregnancy discrimination claims filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission: "These are just the people that bothered to go to the EEOC and file something. For every one of them, there are probably 10 who didn't make a claim."

Rather than waiting for lawmakers to mandate familyfriendly workplace rules, Spiggle encourages people to make sure they understand the protections already in place. Things like the Family and Medical Leave Act, the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act (particularly as it relates to caregivers) and the Equal Pay Act.

This is an issue everyone from workers to business owners — should care about.

In his book, Spiggle writes: "Raising children is, without argument, a matter of fundamental importance for this nation. Yet, for whatever reason, our country has chosen not to devote many public resources for example, subsidized day care — to helping parents make balanced career decisions. I think this is shortsighted." He's right. So let's not treat that as opinion; let's treat it as fact.

How to turn around a team's negative attitude

QUESTION: I'm trying to get my team to be more service-oriented with our internal clients. My group tends to be pretty negative and doesn't seem to see that we all need to be working together. What can I do?

ANSWER: As the leader, establish clear expectations and hold your team accountable to them.

The inner game

How are you feeling about all this? Angry? Frustrated? Don't let that get in the way of finding solutions. Take some time to get settled and in a reflective state of mind. Try focusing on your breathing and letting any tension ease before you think about ways to handle the situation.

Consider any patterns in the behavior, particularly if there are specific internal groups that come in for your team's wrath or if it's more universal. Also note specific behaviors that need to change; being negative is too vague to fix.

Now, why do you think your team behaves this way? It may have started from some run-of-the-mill workplace pressures. This is pretty normal and can be nipped in the bud. But if you, as leader, have allowed it to continue, this will have become a greater challenge. Look back at steps you've tried to address the situation. You can learn from those that have failed as well as those that have been effective.

Finally, look at the reasons you've let this go. Reflect on the gaps in your leadership skills so that you can put a development plan in place.

The outer game

Let's consider, for exam ple, that the team has a habit of bad-mouthing clients behind their backs. Why does this matter? It's just some private venting, right? Wrong! It matters for at least two reasons. Not only does it lay the groundwork for an oppositional rather than collegial relationship between the teams, it also spreads negativity, which drains away energy and creativity.

In order to improve the situation, you need a plan that identifies the targeted behavior, explains why it's a problem and describes the desired new behavior. You also need to know how far you'll go to enforce the change.

After that, get the team involved in discussing how to achieve the new behavior. In this example, it may be as simple as a personal commitment to stop the bad chat and a team plan to remind one another. A "fine jar" can be a fun way to help enforce the new approach — $1 per insult.

But what do you do if they won't even participate? At that point, your leadership spine needs to be strong and you need to know how far you'll take this. If they've tested you before and you've caved, it'll be harder.

You'll need to call people on it every time they cross the line; just as importantly, you'll need to visibly reward positive behavior and be a positive role model to them.

Help yourself out by getting some support; for example, seek training from your company or seek out a mentor. Celebrate your successes, too.

The last word

Create a team culture where positives are rewarded and negatives aren't tolerated, and support your team as they make the shift.

Time has come for workplace flexibility

BY CINDY KRISCHER GOODMAN

The Miami Herald (MCT)

Recently, President Barack Obama officially called workplace flexibility a basic need, lamenting employer policies that don't allow it.

Already, almost all fulltime workers say they have some control over when and where they work for their employers, but managing those arrangements hasn't come naturally to been a big difference between offering flexibility and embracing it.

That seems to have been the case at the Miami Dolphins. This year, when Dolphins scout Nate Sullivan took a phone call from general manager Dennis Hickey, Sullivan had no clue that he was going to be

His attorney, Jason Harr, said Sullivan was not given the option to return to the office. Harr, of The Harr Law Firm, in Daytona Beach, Fla., has sent an intent-to-litigate letter to the franchise and the NFL alleging Sullivan's recent dismissal violated the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Through outside counsel at Akerman Senterfitt. in Miami, the Dolphins wife, JoAnne, who suffers declined to comment on the pending matter.

Workplace expert Cali Yost said a crucial component was missing in the Dolphins' scout's flexible work arrangement: "The danger for him (Sullivan) was that there was nothing in writing, no plan that tracks how the arrangement was working so that when there was a change in leadership, they were working off a set of facts rather than an informal understanding."

Perks of being an intern Corporate giants lay out red carpet

BY COLLEEN WRIGHT The Seattle Times (MCT)

Amazon.com, crosoft and Boeing sweeten already-lucrative job of fers in Seattle with subsidized, furnished housing. Transportation is covered from anywhere in the country, including airport food, baggage fees and taxis. There's free breakfast and dinner, biweekly housekeeping, and a private party with Macklemore and Deadmau5.

And that's just for the interns.

"We are all competing for those top students, said Heidi Dowling, intern-program manager for university recruiting at Microsoft, "and what can we do to make our program stand out and what is attractive for a college student to spend their summer with Microsoft?"

Their strategies are working. More than 3,000 students have brought their talents to Seattle this summer to work at those three companies.

Dan Masi is a Seattle intern veteran. One visit to a career fair at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst was enough to make an Amazon internship in Seattle his first choice this past summer.

Looking for a job? Think small

IF YOU'RE looking only at top-of-your-mind companies for your next job, you may be disappointed. They're not hiring at nearly the rate of places you've never heard about.

Various reports are showing that 2014 job creation is in small and midsized organizations. The ADP payroll processing company, for example, reports that about threefourths of new jobs so far this year were created by firms with fewer than 500 employees.

That's a fairly high-level definition of "small and mid-sized," but it does suggest that your next employment is less likely to come from a Fortune 1,000 type. And you're probably not going to find the opening through a table at a big iob fair or by going online to the Web page of a company you've targeted.

The growing enterprises — the places that need you - may not attend career fairs or recruit on campus. They may not send representatives to chamber of commerce meetings or do other community outreach. They're too busy building their businesses.

When they need new workers, they often use the most expedient method available to them at little to no cost: They ask the people who already work there if they know someone who could fill the position.

That kind of built-in referral network is golden. It can help busy, growing employers bypass the timeconsuming and expensive first step of advertising openings. It also helps narrow the candidate pool to a very few. There's no applicant flood to wade through if the opening isn't posted on the Internet.

A job hunter's personal referral system can extend to clients, vendors and other business partners. And that's good if you're jobhunting, because anyone – including someone with several degrees of separation might turn out to be your personal headhunter for a job you didn't know existed. DIANE STAFFORD is the workplace and careers columnist at The Kansas City Star. Keep a tight lid on post-interview doubts

QUESTION: I desperately want to work for a particular company in my hometown. When I applied for a position recently, I had an interview with a screening committee, which seemed to go well. Everyone was friendly, and they had a lot of questions. A few days later, however, the hiring manager asked me to apply for a different job, which he thought would be a better fit.

Recently, I had the screening interview for that position, and now I'm feeling pessimistic. This meeting was shorter, and the group seemed less welcoming. I think my answers were fine, but noise from the air conditioning might have made them hard to hear.

I would like to tell the hiring manager that even though I may not have done as well in this interview, I am extremely interested in the job. Do you think I should call him?

ANSWER: Your strong desire for this position could easily cause you to create a self-fulfilling prophecy. Like most applicants, you feel out of control, so you scrutinize the hiring process for clues and look for ways to influence the outcome. Unfortunately, however, efforts to make things better can sometimes make them worse.

In reality, you don't have enough evidence to conclude that this interview went badly.

Since the hiring manager has already endorsed you for this position, the last thing you want to do is change his previously positive perceptions. If you contact him now, he may begin to sense your desperation. And if you disparage your own interview performance, he will undoubtedly conclude that you lack self-confidence.

So instead of making an ill-advised call, follow standard protocol and send an upbeat thank-you note to everyone involved. Reiterate your interest in the job, and do not say anything even remotely negative. After that, distract yourself with other activities until you receive the verdict.

In an effort to make WVU's new Mountaineer Summer Drawing Academy more accessible and affordable to budding artists and teens in the state, the university is offering a shorter session at a discounted rate.

The Drawing Academy will take place July 24-26, in Morgantown, and is open to teens ages 14-17. The cost for the camp is $75, thanks to scholarships and donations that have offset the original fee for the camp. The camp is limited to 40 participants.

Teens will participate in activities that will enhance their ability to understand space, place, perspective and structure while honing artistic skills.

Campers will learn traditional drawing techniques like value and perspective but also incorporate techniques learned while participating in field trips to places on WVU's Morgantown campuses.

Participants will experience programs similar to those that first-year college art students complete. They can also learn about college from their camp counselors who are WVU students.

WVU Press wins book of year award from IndieFab

Submitted to The Dominion Post

WVU Press' title, "A Natural History of the Central Appalachians," by Steven L. Stephenson, is Foreword Reviews' IndieFab Book of the Year winner in the category of Ecology and Environment.

Foreword Reviews announced the winners of its annual IndieFab Book of the Year Awards for the best indie books of 2013. Representing hundreds of independent and university presses of all sizes, the winners were selected after months of editorial deliberation over more than 1,500 entries in 60 categories. The winners exemplify the best work coming from today's indie authors and publishers.

Gold, silver, bronze and honorable mention awards as well as editor's choice prizes for fiction and nonfiction were determined by a panel of librarians and booksellers and announced at a special program during the American Library Association Annual Conference, in Las Vegas, on June 27. "A Natural History of the Central Appalachians" was honored with the gold award in the category of Ecology and Environment.

The book thoroughly examines the biology and ecology of the plants, animals and other organisms of this region of eastern North America. With more than 120 images, the text provides an overview of the landscape of this region, including the major changes that have taken place over the past 300 million years; describes the different types of forests and other plant communities currently present in Central Appalachia; and examines living systems ranging from microorganisms and fungi to birds and mammals. Through a consideration of the history of humans in the region, beginning with the arrival of the first Native Americans, "A Natural History of the Central Appalachians" also discusses the past, present and future influences of human activity upon this geographic area.

Steve Stephenson has lived, worked, and carried out research throughout the Central Appalachian region for much of his career. He is a research professor in the Department of Biological Sciences at the University of Arkansas and the author of "Myxomycetes: A Handbook of Slime Molds and The Kingdom Fungi: The Biology of Mushrooms, Molds, and Lichens" and a coauthor of "Macrofungi Associated with Oaks of Eastern North America."

Submitted to The Dominion Post

Morgantown's above-average housing prices negated other lowcost categories and drove the area's overall cost of living 5.6 percent higher than the national average in early 2014, according to a survey released Monday by the Bureau of Business and Economic Research (BBER) at WVU and the Council for Community and Economic Research.

The survey indicated housing prices in Morgantown were 14.2 percent higher than the rest of the United States. In contrast to housing, however, several other cost-of-living categories, such as health care, fall below the national average.

"The report provides some positive news as well as some negative," BBER Director John Deskins said.

"The high cost of housing is a significant concern as business leaders and policymakers work to make Morgantown attractive to families that may consider moving here. But lower-than-average costs in several other areas, such as health care, transportation, utilities and groceries, provide encouraging news." Deskins said.

The BBER is housed within the university's College of Business and Economics.

the cost of living in Morgantown compares to that of several other cities across the U.S.

'The cost of living is higher in Morgantown than in several other university cities, such as Columbus, Ohio, Knoxville, Tennessee, Lexington, Kentucky, and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania," said Eric Bowen, BBER economist.

"However, an important bright spot is that the cost of living in Morgantown is below that of most major U.S. metropolitan areas, and by a significant margin in some cases," he said.

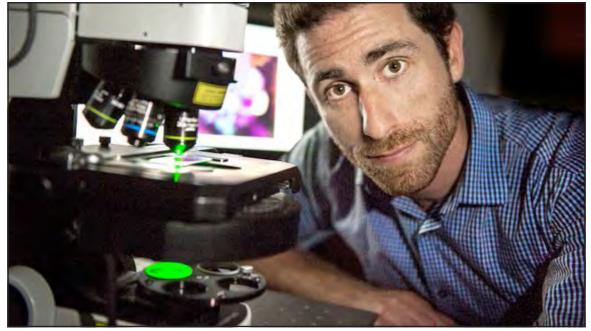

The survey data are used to calculate a cost of living index

The report also examines how that measures a city's relative cost of living in comparison to the national average. The survey included six categories, including groceries, housing, utilities, transportation, health care and miscellaneous purchases. These categories are then combined and plugged into a formula that creates a composite score for each city.

The full report is available from the WVU Bureau of Business and Economic Research, for free download in PDF format, at be.wvu.edu/bber.

Fruit fly research

Andrew Dacks is working to better understand the human nervous system using fruit flies and their sense of smell.

Insight into humans

Submitted to The Dominion Post

We don't really give fruit flies much thought. We give even less thought to whether they can smell.

It turns out that they have a sense of smell, and a WVU researcher is using that sensation to understand how human nervous system response can be altered.

Andrew Dacks, assistant professor in the WVU Department of Biology, said altering the way a neuron responds to a stimulus, known as neuromodulation, offers the nervous system flexibility. Neuromodulation occurs throughout the nervous system and, not surprisingly, is critical for healthy brain function.

"You could have a road map of the town of Morgantown, but without knowing the time of day, time of year or weather conditions, vou will never be able to predict the amount of time it will take to drive from the Suncrest Towne Centre to Dorsev's Knob Park. The map stays the same, but the way cars are able to travel on the map is altered," he said.

"That's what neuromodulation gives you — flexibility to tions in different situations."

As Dacks maps out which neuromodulatory receptors influence which neurons using the fruit flies, he said he's able to determine the effects on how the nervous system processes information. The implications could ultimately reveal general principles about the human nervous system.

Many groups of neurons in a nervous system express the same neuromodulatory receptor, making it challenging to understand how a receptor expressed by one group of neurons contributes to the total effects of neuromodulation.

"Let's say a receptor is expressed in the part of the nervous system that controls walking and the sense of smell, and you get rid of this receptor throughout the whole body of the animal," Dacks said.

"Lo and behold, the animals are no longer attracted to the odor. Is that because they can't adjust how a neural network func- walk properly anymore? Or is it because it's affected their sense of smell?"

Using fruit flies, it is possible to manipulate neuromodulatory receptors expressed in specific groups of neurons without affecting the rest of the nervous system, he said.

"This allows us to have a highly directed approach where we can target our manipulation right to specific parts of the brain."

Exploring the nervous system of the fruit fly, Dacks said, has allowed his team to study the consequences of neuromodulation for odor coding.

The project is funded for three years by a grant from the National Institutes of Health.

Learn to renegotiate or renew oil and gas leases

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The WVU Extension Service is presenting a free, educational program for the general public entitled "Understanding Renegotiation and Renewal of Natural Gas Leases.'

There will be two opportunities to attend. The first is at 6 p.m. July 22, at the West Virginia Northern Community College, on Market Street, in Wheeling. For directions, contact WVU Extension Agent Norm Schwertfeger, at 304-737-3666. Schwertfeger serves Brooke, Hancock, Marshall and Ohio counties.

The second will take place on at 6 p.m. July 24, at the Doddridge County Park, in West Union. Contact Doddridge County WVU Extension Service Agriculture Agent Dave Snively for directions, at 304-873-1801.

"With many of the early Marcellus leases signed 3-5 years ago expiring or about to expire, it is important for mineral and landowners to understand the intricacies of negotiating new leases or renewing existing leases to maximize their benefits and protect their assets," said Snively. "We want to educate people about all the variables involved so they can reach a decision about what is best for their situation."

Eric Gordon, a lawyer with experience in writing and negotiating natural gas leases from the Berry, Kessler, Crutchfield, Taylor and Gordon law firm, along with experts from the WVU Extension Service, will be on hand to discuss the opportunities and challenges posed by the growth and development of the region's gas industries.

After each presentation, there will be a question and answer session.

With gas leases on the minds of property owners across the state, WVU Extension Service's Oil and Natural Gas Team aims to provide unbiased programming based on expertise and knowledge to help the citizens of West Virginia make informed decisions about the natural gas industry.

For general information about the program, contact Georgette Plaugher at 304-329-1391, visit anr.ext.wvu.edu/oil_gas, or contact your local office of the WVU Extension Service.

Professor writes book on coal bed methane applications

Submitted to The Dominion Post

A WVU engineering professor recently authored a textbook on advancements in the production of coal bed methane (CBM).

Kashy Aminian, of the petroleum and natural gas engineering department of the Statler College, has written about the vast coal resources in the United States.

"Coal Bed Methane: From Prospect to Pipeline" captures the full life cycle of a well. It addresses crucial technical topics, including exploration and evaluation of coal bed reservoirs, hydraulic fracturing of CBM wells, coal seam degasification and production engineering and processing, among others. It also covers legal issues, permitting and economic analysis of CBM projects.

Team wins innovation competition

Submitted to The Dominion Post

When innovators are told it cannot be done, they ask, "Why not?" That inspiration fueled a team from WVU as they competed in an event known as 24 Hours of Innovation.

More than 1,500 students on five continents participated in the competition, but it was the WVU team, known as the Y-Nots, who won.

The competition, which was hosted by École de Technologie Superieure (ÉTS), in Montreal, Canada, gives teams 24 hours to find creative solutions to challenges put forward by businesses. ÉTS sent student ambassadors to each team to help guide them through the process.

The Y-Nots consisted of WVU students Joshua Kurnot, Fares Alblouwy and Kristin Krumenacker and ÉTS students Asmaa Rahali, Milad Naderi and Sylvain Degue.

The competition started at 9 a.m., when teams were presented with 20 problems from which to choose. The Y-Nots debated and voted until they agreed upon a challenge, which was simply titled, "Reinvent the Stairs." The submitting organization was looking for a way to entice college students to use staircases more often, thus forgoing the use of elevators and escalators. Not only did the Y-Nots have to develop the concept, they also had to create a two-minute video presenting the solution and post it to the competition's website, all within 24 hours.

The idea submitted by the WVU team was to create a rewards system. Students would scan their IDs when they entered and exited the staircase and earn points that they could then use at locations across campus. Additionally, the team advocated for the installation of small, electric generators under each step, which could generate 5 watts per step, per person, making the building sustainable.

"It was a realistic problem that could be easily implemented and aimed at a specific audience," explained Alblouwy, a senior mechanical engineering student from Tabock, Saudi Arabia. "Our idea was simple and we made it green and sustainable."

Kabul, Afghanistan, native Naderi, who is a civil engineering student at ÉTS, said the biggest challenge was to transfer the idea into a video, so they highlighted key words and phrases to make their point.

Adding to the simplicity of the idea, the team did not actually invent any new items.

"Innovation is taking ideas and doing them in a different way," said Krumenacker, a senior computer engineering major from Nicktown, Pa. "You don't have to come up with a new technology, just a new way to use existing technology.'

Their idea and video were judged by a local panel and the best ideas were sent to the international judges located in Montreal. The next morning during a webcast, WVU, in its first time competing, was announced the winner.

At first, the Y-Nots were not convinced they had won.

"They announced it on the webcast, but it was in French, so I didn't understand it," recounted Krumenacker. "I had to wait until they posted the results online before I believed it."

GMC Sierra HD ready for Herculean tasks

BY MARK PHELAN

Detroit Free Press (MCT)

If you have a small mountain to move, you may well be drawn to heavy-duty pickups. The four-star 2015 GMC Sierra HD 4WD Double Cab may well be your tool, or augmentation, of choice.

Heavy-duty pickups are among the most capable vehicles on the road. They're industrial grade haulers that offer creature comforts such as ventilated seats and voice-controlled navigation and phone calls. Heavy-duty pickups get beefed-up versions of virtually every structural part and mechanical component of automakers' regular pickups, which are called "light duty" despite being able to tow up to 12,000 pounds, more than the average Indian bull elephant weighs.

Heavy-duty trucks are exempt from Environmental Protection Agency fuel economy tests and corporate average fuel economy ratings. Like UPS vans, semi trucks and farm tractors, they are considered commercial vehicles. They get a pass because they are classified as key to the U.S. economy, like freight trains.

Heavy duties account for a growing proportion of the pickup market. They're fabulously profitable and attract a surprising number of personal-use buyers in addition to the farmers, horse breeders and oil wildcatters you might expect.

Heavy-duty pickups are exclusively the domain of the Detroit Three. Chevrolet, Ford, GMC and Ram all build them. Toyota and Nissan don't

The GMC Sierra 2500 HD has a variety of wheelbases, bed lengths and drivetrains. It's available in rear- or four-wheeldrive and with a gasoline or diesel V-8 engine.

Prices start at $31,565 for a rear-drive two-door with a twodoor cab, 360-horsepower 6.0-liter V-8 gasoline engine and six-speed automatic transmission.

I tested a four-door Double Cab SLT model with four-wheel-drive, diesel engine, leather interior, parking assist and many other features. It cost $61,485. All prices exclude destination charges.

Mechanically, the Sierra 2500 HD is nearly identical to the Chevrolet Silverado 2500 HD. The Sierra justifies a slightly higher price with a cushier interior, some extra features and unique visual elements

The Sierra I tested competes with the Silverado 2500 HD Double Cab LTZ, Ford F-250 4WD Super Cab and Ram 2500 4WD Laramie Crew Cab.

The GMC is at the high end of the price range for those trucks.

All the HD pickups offer optional diesel engines and heavyduty transmissions for more towing capacity and better fuel economy than the gasoline engines. The GMC's 6.6-liter, V-8 diesel produces 397 horsepower and 765 pound-feet of torque. The diesel and heavy-duty six-speed Allison transmission are an $8,395 option package. The other brands' HD diesels cost about the same.

While customers pay handsomely for the diesels, the fact that the EPA doesn't rate heavyduty pickups' fuel economy makes it impossible to compare the vehicles accurately. The same goes for towing capacity. None of the manufacturers have yet adopted the SAE standard for towing, meaning that each student essentially grades his own homework.

The Sierra 2500's claimed towing capacity of the truck is 800 pounds more than a comparable F-250, 50 pounds less than a Ram. The Sierra 2500's 17,900-pound maximum claimed towing capacity is greater than either Ford or Ram offers.

The Duramax diesel performs admirably in regular driving.

The Double Cab's interior is not as spacious as the crew cab, but the rear seat is more than serviceable. The front seat has plenty of room, a spacious bin in the center console and plenty of connections for power and USBs.

The interior materials look and feel great, with soft wraps for the dash and doors, brushed aluminum-look trim, a large touch screen and plenty of dials and buttons for easy use.

The 2500 HD is amazingly comfortable in everyday use.

Keep children safe around the water this summer

ONE OF THE BEST things about summer is all the days you can spend at the pool — especially when you are a kid.

I've finished up our annual 4-H day camp and will begin younger camp next week. I would bet that, if asked, the majority of campers would say their favorite part of camp is swimming (with our evening campfire program coming in a close second, of course).

Rory, my daughter, will turn 20 months old next week and can't get enough time in the pool and water, but pool time tends to stress me out with all the potential hazards. My main goal when it comes to Rory, as well as the 330 campers that I am in charge of at camp, is safety. I want to ensure that they all live healthy, safe lives.

When researching statistics related to drowning, in general, and water safety, it becomes even scarier. According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), every day 10 people die from unintentional drowning. Of those, two are children aged 14 and younger. Drowning ranks fifth among the leading causes of unintentional injury death in the United States.

The main factors that affect drowning risk are lack of swimming ability, lack of barriers to prevent unsupervised water access, lack of close supervision while swimming, location, failure to wear life jackets, alcohol use and seizure disorders.

- Lack of swimming ability: Many adults and children report they can't swim. Research has shown that participation in formal swimming lessons can reduce the risk of drowning among children aged 1 to 4.
- Lack of barriers: Barriers, such as pool fencing, prevent young children from gaining access to the pool area without caregivers' awareness. A foursided isolation fence (separating the pool area from the house and yard) reduces a child's risk of drowning 83 percent compared to three-sided property-line fencing.
- Lack of close supervision: Drowning can happen quickly and quietly anywhere there is water (such as bathtubs, swimming pools and buckets), and even in the presence of lifeguards.
- Location: People of different ages drown in different locations. For example, most children ages 1-4 drown in home swimming pools. The percentage of drownings in natural water settings, such as lakes, rivers and oceans, increases with age.

- Failure to wear life jackets: In 2010, the U.S. Coast Guard received reports for 4,604 boating incidents; 3,153 boaters were reported injured, and 672 died. Most (72 percent) boating deaths that occurred during 2010 were caused by drowning, with 88 percent of victims not wearing life jackets.
- Alcohol use: Among adolescents and adults, alcohol use is involved in up to 70 percent of deaths associated with water recreation, almost a quarter of emergency department visits for drowning and about one in five reported boating deaths. Alcohol influences balance, coordination and judgment, and its effects are heightened by sun exposure and heat.
- Seizure disorders: For people with seizure disorders, drowning is the most common cause of unintentional injury death, with the bathtub as the site of highest drowning risk.

I think we all can agree that the statistics and factors above are all pretty scary. Often times, we are so focused on ensuring fun that we tend to focus less on the potential hazards in situations.

It is important to always keep close supervision of any child who needs special attention in the pool. Also, according to the CDC, there are ways to be proactive about safety in water.

A recent study has shown that those children who are between the ages of 1 and 4, are less likely to drown if they take part in a formal swim lesson. There are a variety of swim lessons offered throughout our region. We took swim lessons with Rory last fall through WVU's Lifetime Activities Program and are looking forward to swim lessons through BOPARC later this month. Swim lessons offer a great way for children to safely explore the water with adult supervision.

Here are some other great tips the CDC has outlined to ensure water safety:

■ Supervise when in or around water. Designate a responsible adult to watch young children while in the bath and all children swimming or playing in or around water. Supervisors of preschool children should provide "touch supervision," that is, be close enough to reach the child at all times.

Because drowning occurs quickly and quietly, adults should not be involved in any other distracting activity — such as reading, playing cards, talking on the phone or mowing the lawn — while supervising children, even if lifeguards are present.

■ Use the buddy system. Always swim with a buddy. Select swimming sites that have lifeguards when possible.

- Practice seizure disorder safety. If you or a family member has a seizure disorder, provide one-on-one supervision around water, including swimming pools. Consider taking showers rather than using a bath tub for bathing. Wear life jackets when boating.
- Learn to swim. As stated above, formal swimming lessons can protect young children from drowning. However, even when children have had formal swimming lessons, constant, careful supervision when children are in the water, and barriers, such as pool fencing to prevent unsupervised access, are still important.
- Learn cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). In the time it takes for paramedics to arrive, your CPR skills could save someone's life.
- Air-filled or foam toys are not safety devices. Don't use air-filled or foam toys, such as "water wings," "noodles" or inner-tubes, in place of life jackets. These toys are not life jackets and are not designed to keep swimmers safe.
- Avoid alcohol. Don't drink alcohol before or during swimming, boating or water skiing. Do not drink alcohol while supervising children.
 - Keep an eye on the weather. Know the local weather conditions and forecast before swimming or boating. Strong winds and thunderstorms with lightning strikes are dangerous.

If you have a swimming pool at home:

- Install fencing on all sides. Install a four-sided pool fence that completely separates the pool area from the house and yard. The fence should be at least 4 feet high. Use self-closing and self-latching gates that open outward, with latches that are out of reach of children. Also, consider additional barriers such as automatic door locks and alarms to prevent access or alert vou if someone enters the pool area.
- Clear the pool and deck of toys. Remove floats, balls and other toys from the pool and surrounding area immediately after use so children are not tempted to enter the pool area unsupervised.
- Review rules. It is very important to review water safety with your children, as well as caregivers who may accompany your children to a pool, lake or beach.

Tips on saving gas for summer

BY MARK PHELAN

Detroit Free Press (MCT)

As the summer driving season begins in earnest, keeping an eye on your fuel economy can put dollars in your pocket.

The folks behind the website fueleconomy.gov the U.S. Department of Energy and the Environmental Protection Agency — offer some new tips.

First is a new feature that lets you get a detailed cost estimate of your trips and compare the cost of different routes and vehicles. Called My Trip Calculator (fueleconomy.gov/trip), it's full of surprises.

For instance, fuel for a family trip from Birmingham, Mich., to the Cedar Point amusement would cost $14.93 in a 2014 Honda Accord, $20.77 in a 2014 Chrysler Town & Country minivan and $12.34 in a 2014 Chevrolet Cruze diesel compact.

There's one surprising omission in the site's calculations: It expects you to estimate what percentage of your trip is highway versus city driving, rather than using the mapping database for specific figures. (Based on the route directions, I told it to assume 85 percent highway for the Cedar Point trip.) Despite that oversight, the site allows you to compare the cost of different vehicles and routes.

You can also program multiple stops. If, for instance, you continued from Cedar Point for a weekend at the Shaw Festival in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, the cost rises to $47.93 in the Accord, $66.70 in the minivan and $39.66 in the Cruze diesel.

Fueleconomy.gov also offers tips to maximize the miles per gallon of hybrids, electric vehicles and plugin hybrids.

Among the suggestions: ■ Keep EV and plug-in batteries fully charged. Contrary to popular opinion, frequent charges to top off lithium-ion batteries do not reduce a battery's storage capacity or shorten its life. Full charges also maximize the distance plug-ins cover before their gasoline engines take over.

■ Avoid hard braking. Steady, gentle braking maximizes the amount of regenerative energy that's pumped back into the batteries.

■ Use the economy mode. It seems obvious, but you'd be surprised how many people don't. The econ mode affects other systems, particularly climate control and acceleration, but you won't know if the change bothers you unless you try it.

So that's what the little picture of a tire is for Few things a driver does have a bigger effect on fuel economy than proper tire inflation. The tire pressure monitors that have been mandatory on all new vehicles since model year 2008 should make that easy, but a whopping 42 percent of drivers have no idea what the tire pressure warning means, according to Schrader International, a supplier of sensors.

U.S. government statistics say under-inflated tires lead to 660 deaths and 33,000 injuries annually. Correct tire pressure improves fuel economy 3.3 percent, but American drivers waste 3.5 million gallons of gasoline a day because of underinflated tires.

Low- or no-fuel cars pose problem for states that levy a gasoline tax

BY RITA BEAMISH

Stateline.org (MCT)

A tax on virtue or a matter of fairness? The question ripples through states trying to prop up their ever-shrinking highway funds while eyeing the "free ride" enjoyed by green vehicle owners. The fast-growing cohort of people who drive zeroand low-emission cars and trucks can take satisfaction in their lower environmental footprint. But there's a downside, at least for states and the federal government: When cars gas up at the pump less often, governments collect fewer fuel tax dollars for highway needs. The lost revenue is just a part of the well-documented decline in highway funds as the federal gas tax remains static, auto fleets achieve ever-higher fuel efficiency and new technology enables alternative fuels.

Enter the notion of recouping at least some lost revenue by charging special fees to alternative vehicles — notwithstanding ongoing efforts by Washington and many states to instead encourage these vehicles through income tax credits, lower registration fees and even free parking spaces. The fees are meeting sporadic success.

Lawmakers in Virginia touched a nerve in 2013 with a new $64 annual tax on the state's 91,000 hybrid owners, 90 percent of them from the northern part of the state near Washington, D.C. Objections immediate and loud, spurred a petition that garnered more than 7,700 signatures.

Hybrid owners felt singled out for a double whammy, because hybrids using both gas and electric power are still subject to gas taxes when they fill up. Additionally, some bigger hybrids use more gas paying more fuel tax than new, highly efficient gas-powered cars that were not covered by the new fee, said Democratic state Del. Scott Surovell. who spearheaded the repeal petition. It was akin to charging non-smokers for not paying their fair share of tobacco taxes —"taxing people for doing the right thing," he said. The legislature repealed the tax this year.

"The takeaway is: Don't start taxing energy efficient behavior that you are trying to encourage," said Surovell. He said governments instead should figure out how to subsidize clean vehicles until they are widely affordable.

"Having EV drivers contribute a modest fee is a reasonable and commonsense approach to maintaining our roads and highways," said Tom Turrentine, director of the Plug-in Hybrid Electric and Vehicle Research Center at the University of California-Davis.

It only hurts the political cause of obtaining government incentives for alternative-fuel vehicles if EV drivers balk at paying such "fair share" taxes, Turrentine said.

Government incentives for green vehicles have helped narrow the price gap between EVs and gas-powered models. That includes the popular leasing market, where companies can receive rebates and incorporate them into leasing fees, Turrentine said. The growth in gas-electric hybrid sales makes them no longer eligible for federal rebates.

Uber maps a route into the suburbs

BY RICHARD NEWMAN

The Record (Hackensack, N.J.) (MCT)

When network Uber debuted four years ago, the San Francisco-based company became an urban phenomenon, picking up executives burning the midnight oil or ferrying millennials to clubs and restaurants. It spread to New York City a year later and it now operates in more than 30 countries. In the process, Uber has entered the ranks of business disrupters, roiling taxi and limousine operators, and prompting a cabbie strike in London, in May.

Uber is trying to make its business model work in the less densely populated suburbs. The car-service network started operating in the north New Jersey environs about six months ago. It is recruiting drivers on craigslist and luring passengers, mainly by word-of-mouth.

Take Fort Lee High School student Michael Zhadanovsky. When his mother couldn't pick him up after school during the spring, sometimes he walked the mile or so to his house. But if the weather was bad, or he didn't feel like walking, he went to his iPhone and summoned an Uber driver, and there were five or six Uber drivers cruising in the neighborhood, he said. The app lets him see their locations on his phone. He paid $14 to $20 for the rides. "It's not cheap, but it's convenient," said Zhadanovsky, 17, who learned about the service from his older brother, who lives in Washington, D.C. "I wouldn't normally call a taxi, but this is on your phone," he said. Now some of his friends are using it, too, he said.

Once an Uber customer downloads the app and enters a credit card number, the customer simply presses a touch screen button on his or her phone, and within seconds sees the locations of Uber vehicles in the area. Customers also can punch in their destination and get an advance estimate of the fare.

Riders receive a text confirmation when their ride request is accepted, and pickup is in less than 10 minutes on average, Uber said. The fare is charged to the card, tip included.

While the introduction of Uber's UberX ride-sharing service in New Jersey, in November, found customers among airportbound travelers and young people without cars, it also attracted the immediate atAssociation of New Jersey, which made lobbying against it a top priority. Uber and other so-called transportation network companies have an unfair cost advantage on limousine operators because drivers are not always properly licensed or insured, said Jeff Shanker, the executive vice president of A-1 Limousine in Princeton, N.J. He is also vice president of legislative affairs for the trade group. "We recognize that it's a new era," he said "But there are people being picked up in personal vehicles, and they do not have commercial insurance." The 85-member association has been urging the state Departments of Labor and Motor Vehicles to take enforcement action against Uber and its drivers, and has lobbied for legislation that would subject it to the same regulations that govern limousine operators. The measure would require Uber and other ride-sharing drivers to have chauffeur licenses, chauffer plates and $1.5 million in liability coverage for bodily injury and property damage, or face fines of up tention of the Limousine to $2,500 for a first offense. Like their traditional limousine driver counterparts, the drivers would have to get criminal background checks through the state police.

"We want to make sure we get everybody on a level playing field," Shanker said. "The way many (Uber drivers) are operating is illegal. There are no background checks; there are no bona-fide license plates. They don't have the correct insurance."

Much of the legal and regulatory conflict has been over the lower-fare UberX drivers, one of several Uber services. UberX drivers can qualify if they are 21 years old, have a personal driver's license and personal auto insurance, and if their car is a mid- or full-size four-door passenger vehicle "in excellent condition," the company says on its Web page where drivers sign up. Drivers can qualify to provide high-priced UberBLACK service only if they are professional chauffeurs with commercial licenses and commercial auto insurance. They, too, drive their own cars, which must be black and either a sedan, town car

Buick cruise control is none too steady

BY BRAD BERGHOLDT

QUESTION: The cruise control is intermittent on my 1998 Buick Regal LS, which has 130,000 miles. Outside temperature seems to determine if it operates. It works OK if the temperature is below about 75 degrees. This started shortly after the coolant change at

McClatchy-Tribune News Service (MCT)

100,000 miles. My son is an airline technician. He would like to check for heat expansion causing a short or break in the circuit but needs a "road map." Where is the speed sensor located? Maybe he can follow the wiring to the trouble spot.

Your help would be greatly appreciated. I am 90 and want to make this Buick my last car. —Ray Forrester

ANSWER: Ray, I'm going to try to help you sort this out, but I need to keep things fairly general so that the information will be of possible interest to others. Your Buick's cruise control system consists mainly of the cruise control module/actuator unit located on the left strut tower, the control switches, the brake pedal release switch, and cooperation with the pow-ertrain control module, or PCM. The cruise control module is the place to go for testing, and thankfully it's easily accessed. I tell my students a control module is like a train station all the trains come and go from it. Almost everything you'd want to know can be observed there.

The Buick's PCM shares vehicle speed input with the cruise control module and can order the cruise control to stand down if diagnostic trouble codes are present or transmission gear, vehicle speed, battery voltage or engine speed are out of allowable range.

The first thing I always check with an inoperative or intermittent cruise system is the brake pedal release (cruise inhibit) switch. Next time the cruise control acts up, try sneaking a toe beneath the brake pedal and pull back slightly, then attempt to reengage the cruise. If this restores operation, the pedal switch is out of adjustment or faulty.

Have your son obtain the very clear one-page cruise control system wiring diagram via Alldata or On-Demand-5.

Out of this world

CBS shoots for the stars with sci-fi thriller 'Extant'

By Cassie Dresch

TV Media

What defines us as humans? What is it that powers emotions and consciousness? Are there other beings out there in the universe that are cognizant? Are we alone in the universe?

They're all intriguing questions that open the discussion into the world of UFOs, extraterrestrials and artificial intelligences, as well as the discussion on just what exactly makes us human. You know, your standard sci-fi fare.

CBS is delving into that world (or possibly out of this world?) with one of the most highly anticipated, not-so-standard sci-fi series of the summer. "Extant" is a futuristic thriller that follows an astronaut coming home and trying to reconnect with her family after a yearlong solo mission in outer space. Catch the series premiere Wednesday, July 9, on the eye network.

While the premise sounds like the perfect setup for a typical character drama, there are a couple key factors that hint at something that'll be far, far more compelling.

First and foremost, CBS has snagged some A-list names to star and executive produce the show, and when big names join a project, its story is bound to be just as big.

Academy Award winner Halle Berry ("Die Another Day," 2002) will star in the lead role in "Extant" as astronaut Molly Woods, back on Earth for the first time in a year after a solo mission in outer space. Berry has a movie resume as long as the trip to the moon and back, but she's returning to her roots — her first big break in Hollywood came as the star in the short-lived comedy series "Living Dolls" in 1989.

From there she bounced around with a couple guest spots on other TV shows, including a six-episode arc in the primetime soap opera "Knots Landing. It didn't take long before she transitioned to the silver screen, and Berry carved her way into movie greatness with roles in "Jungle Fever" (1991), "The Flintstones" (1994),

"Swordfish" (2001), "X-Men" (2000) and its sequels, "Cloud Atlas" (2012) and the movie for which she won her Oscar, "Monster's Ball" (2001).

Another big name who is working behind the scenes is the legendary director and producer Steven Spielberg ("Catch Me If You Can," 2002), who'll be donning the executive producer hat for "Extant." To say that Spielberg has had an illustrious career is a massive understatement. For a man whose name is synonymous with filmmaking, it comes as no surprise that he's won more than 150 awards in his career — ranging from BAFTAs and Golden Globes to Daytime and Primetime Emmys. He has three Academy Awards to his name and another nine Oscar nominations.

Spielberg brings the pedigree to the small screen, as well as a knowledge and love for the sci-fi thriller genre. While his two Oscar-winning movies (Best Director for "Saving Private Ryan," 1998; Best Director and Best Picture for "Schindler's List," 1993) were wartime dramas, some of his other big-ticket masterpieces were from another planet. "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" (1977), "Men In Black" (1997) and "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial" (1982) all feature something otherworldly, and this background is sure to benefit "Extant."

njic ("ER"), and her son Ethan, played factor that by the adorable yet frightening Pierce suggests "Ex-Gagnon ("Looper," 2012). The thing is, tant" however, her son is a machine with artiwill be ficial intelligence, and he's treated just like a human boy. So now, not only do more the questions revolve around what hapthan just your runpened in space, but also about what in of-the-mill, the world is going down on Earth and the fears associated with changing techsci-fi nology. "What makes us human? Can machines be human?" showrunner and executive producer Greg Walker said of the essential guestion that underlies the series. In his interview with "The Hollywood Reporter," he also mentioned that what makes us human is as much of a draw to aliens as anything the show explores.

MTV launches new cooking competition

By Andrew Warren

TV Media

We may have suspected it before, but now we know the truth: MTV is turning into a Food Network competitor.

OK, so I'm exaggerating a bit here, but after the success of "House of Food" the "Top Chef" meets "Real World" mashup that aired earlier this year the youth-skewing network is continuing to explore the ballooning space of food-based television.

Next up on MTV is "Snack-Off," premiering Thursday, July 10. Taking a page from the Food Network's "Chopped" playbook, each episode of "Snack-Off" will bring together three contestants who will be charged with creating the perfect snack food using only what they can find in the set's kitchen.

It's a situation we've all been in. whether it's two in the afternoon or the middle of the night — we need a snack and we need it now. Unfortunately, the fridge doesn't always want to co-operate with our stomachs, and sometimes these spur-of-the-moment snack combos end up becoming a tasty favorite other times they just end up in the trash

It's definitely more tongue-in-cheek than most of the other cooking shows out there, too. With eccentric chef Eddie Huang hosting and the winner of each episode taking home the coveted golden spork necklace (along with a fancy little cash prize and their winning recipes in an upcoming cookbook), "Snack-Off" certainly can't be accused of taking itself too seriously.

Naturally, there are judges on hand to pick between the snack winners and losers. Outspoken chef Jason Quinn, supermodel Chrissy Teigen and comedian Yassir Lester will all be on hand to provide their own tongue-in-cheek commentary and, ultimately, pick a winner.

With Millennial favorite Huang hosting hilarious antics in the kitchen and biting commentary from the judges, "Snack-Off" is looking to capture a younger piece of the huge food-centric audience. Folks looking for something a little bit different won't want to miss the fun starting Thursday, July 10, on MTV.

What a 'Rush'

New actors join USA's exciting new medical drama

By Andrew Warren

TV Media

What a 'Rush': USA's highly anticipated and exciting new medical drama has been busy bulking up its cast.

"Rush" has been in the works for some time now, and as we rush ever closer to its July 17 premiere, the casting announcements have been coming in fast and furious. Starring Tom Ellis ("Miranda") as Dr. William Rush, a renegade doctor who caters to the rich and famous of L.A., "Rush" is shaping up to be a roller-coaster ride of a show.

Harry Hamlin, best known for his recurring roles in "Mad Men" and "Veronica Mars," has been brought on board into a new recurring role as Dr. Rush's estranged father, a fellow doctor who disapproves of his son's antics. Joining him on set will be the beautiful Rachel Nichols ("Continuum," "Alias") as his younger trophy wife with her own hidden demons to face.

Even the smaller roles are being snatched up by established actors — usually a good sign for a new show. Jesse Luken ("Justified") and Victoria Smurfit ("Dracula," "The Beach," 2000) will be popping up as guest stars in the second episode.

Filming in Vancouver — a northern hub of television filming — "Rush" will also star Sarah Habel ("Whip It," 2009), Odette Annable ("House M.D."), Rick Gonzalez ("Coach Carter," 2005) and Cindy Busby ("Heartland").

There's a lot of medical dramas on TV these days, but "Rush" has an edge that's set to make it stand out from the crowd.

Catch its premiere Thursday, July 17, on USA.

Just right: Oprah Winfrey's TV network is beefing up its slate of original programming with an original new drama.

"If Loving You is Wrong" was announced a few months ago under the working title "The Single Moms Club," and as we draw closer to its September premiere, the casting slots have been filling up quickly for the OWN drama.

The ensemble drama will follow the lives of a group of couples all living on the same street. The loving pairs all come from different backgrounds, but with difficult children, fading romances and meddling exes all part of the picture, it's obvious that no matter how different families may seem on the surface, they all face similar difficulties once you dig a bit deeper.

And just who's been cast as these couples? Amanda Clayton ("John Carter," 2012) and Aiden Turner ("All My Children") will play married couple Alex and Brad; Heather Hemmens ("Hellcats") and Eltony Williams ("24") will play a couple struggling with their inability to have children; Zulay Henao ("Love Thy Neighbor") plays a divorced mom caught between her ex (Joel Rush, "Days of Our Lives") and her new boyfriend (Octavio Pizano, "East Los High").

That's quite the cast list — and that's not even all of it. Also living on the street are characters played by Edwina Findley ("Treme"), April Parker-Jones ("Jericho") and Charles Malik Whitfield ("The Guardian").

That's quite the list of cast members! "If Loving You is Wrong" has one more thing going for it: Tyler Perry. The prolific writer, producer and director already has two hits on his hands on OWN ("The Haves

and the Have

and "Love Thy Neighbor"), and "If Loving Your is Wrong" is lining up to be the third. Watch for its premiere in September.

A history of liberty: Their names are legendary. Sam Adams. Paul Revere. John Adams. John Hancock. Joseph Warren.

These were the men who sparked a revolution, and now History is taking a look at an earlier stage in their lives, before the powdered wigs and awe-inspiring speeches.

"Sons of Liberty," a six-part miniseries that begins production this summer, will tell these men's stories as they looked for a purpose in their lives and ended up finding something even greater.

The task of bringing some of America's most storied founders to life on screen is a heavy one, and as usual, History hasn't been stingy with the actors it has brought on board.

Ben Barnes ("Dorian Grey," 2009) has been cast as Sam Adams, the charismatic leader with a love of mischief; Ryan Eggold ("The Blacklist," "90210") will be playing Joseph Warren, the honest and loyal doctor; and Rafe Spall ("Life of Pi," 2012) will be taking on the role of John Hancock, Boston's wealthiest man.

For the important role of Paul Revere, Michael Raymond-James ("True Blood") has come on board, and Henry Thomas ("Gangs of New York," 2002) will play

John Adams.
Actors cast in other roles include Marton Csokas ("The Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring," 2001), Emily Berrington ("24: Live Another Day") and Dean Norris ("Breaking Bad") as Benjamin Franklin.

Sam Adams' conservative cousin.

The L.A. Kings won their second Stanley Cup in three years. Here's what's interesting: in other cities, when the hockey team wins the championship, rowdy fans overturn cars. In Los Angeles, rowdy fans UNPLUG cars.

Hey, America's in the World Cup. Did you even know that? Experts say they have less than a one per cent chance of winning the World Cup, and even their coach said winning is not realistic — all of which sounds like one hell of a pre-game pep talk.
